THOUSANDS ARE IN PERIL AS FIRE SWEEPS FORESTS

WAUSAU, Wis., July 22.—The losses from forest fires in the district north and east continues and every hour brings reports of new country in flames. No progress is being made toward stemming the flames sweeping a large portion of Central Wisconsin.

TOWN SURROUNDED BY WALL OF FIRE.

The town of Galloway is surrounded by a wall of fire about ten miles wide. No lives have been lost, but thousands are in peril. The virtual destruction of the Huntington forest reserve near Kelly is a serious loss to the State. The damage is $500,000. The fire covers an area ten miles in length extending West and East.

For weeks farmers have driven their herds, emaciated for want of food, to the railroad stations to dispose of them at any price. The drought, the worst in thirty years, has parched the crops and pasturage.

Prayers for rain will be said in nearly every church in the central and northern sections of the State Sunday. On instructions from Monsignor Bahner, vicar-general and personal representative of Archbishop Messmer, who is in Europe, all Roman Catholic churches of the State will join in such prayers.

The village of Palestine is the heart of a fire swept district. Rain saved the village for a few days, but the fire began today with greater fury than ever.

Forest fires stilled by last week's rain are reviving and again causing serious damage. Fresia Park, on the Copper Range Railroad, reports bad fires in that section.

Manitoba Towns Destroyed.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 22.—Latest reports from Sandon, in the Kootenay district, state that that town is in imminent danger. The women and children have fled on a rescue train. Three Forks, reported burning, is still in existence, but is threatened by fire. The total destruction of Water and McGinnis is confirmed.

Fire is closing in on the Rossland Ore mines. At Kenora, Ont., 100 miles east of here, both fires are within a mile of the town. The only fatalities reported are five miners who were suffocated at the Lucky Claim mine. Many ranchers in the Arrow Park district have lost everything.

Washington Town Wiped Out.

SPOKANE, Wash., July 22.—The town of Marble, on the Columbia River, about ten miles south of the Canadian boundary, is reported to have been virtually destroyed by forest fires. Fires in the Flat Creek country, near Rossburg, are spreading. In Cabin Creek basin, citizens have been fighting flames since Sunday afternoon. All buildings at the Sayonlon mine at Rossburg have been burned.

O'CONNELL FINED $20; TO APPEAL

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell was found guilty and fined $20 in the Dorchester Police Court to-day by Judge Cantrell on a charge of violation of the election laws during the Fitzgerald-Storrow municipal election last January. The congressman appealed and was held on his own recognizance. The fine was finally imposed after nine hearings and continuances were granted.

A number of the congressman's political supporters were in the court room, as was his brother, Daniel T. O'Connell, the attorney. The government's case was handled by Sergeant James E. Pendergast, the complainant. John R. McVey, represented O'Connell.

The Congressman was much surprised at the Court's finding and says he will fight the case to a finish. The complaint grew out of a charge preferred by Sergeant Pendergast that Congressman O'Connell was handing out printed cards to the voters on election day which influenced them to vote for Fitzgerald.

Prendergast Tells His Story.

Sergeant Pendergast was the first government witness. He stated that on a complaint received at the police station on Tuesday, January 11, he went to the polling booth at Precinct No. 5, Meeting House Hill, Dorchester. While there he saw a man approach Congressman O'Connell and ask him what the ticket was. At that the Congressman passed him a card.

The sergeant said he spoke to O'Connell, saying: "You are violating the law. You have no right to pass out those cards." In reply the witness declared that O'Connell told him he was acting within his right.

Sergeant Pendergast then told the court how he and Patrolman Patton took the Congressman aside and he the witness, read the law on the subject from a book. The witness declared that the defendant said: "I don't give a damn. I know I am acting in my rights; I know what I'm doing."

The sergeant declared that he went into the polling booth and saw the man whom Congressman O'Connell gave the card to drop the same on the floor. He appeared to be a laborer.

No Trouble With Fitzgerald.

At this Mr. McVey cross-examined Sergeant Pendergast.

Q.—Didn't you have some trouble with Mayor Fitzgerald before the election. A.—No 41 never did.

Q.—Didn't you say that if Fitzgerald was elected that something would drop next week? A.—No. I don't remember of ever making such a remark.

Patrolman Patton was the next witness. He revised the situation as described by the previous witness and told how the defendant declared that he was acting within his rights. He also said that he was the Congressman passing out cards as he was stationed at the polls from 4 o'clock in the morning until the polls closed.

Patrolman Frank Saunders and Patrolman James J. Curtis gave similar stories.

John McVey in summing up the defense declared that the government had not proven its case. He stated that a card, according to the defendant's testimony, was passboard and this printed matter in the card was on paper. He declared that there had been no violation of the law, as no voter was instructed. At the close he asked for the acquittal of the congressman.

Judge Cantrell declared that the government had proved its case beyond a reasonable doubt. He said that the statute, although short, was very plain and was not technical. The Judge declared that the law called cards informed the voters how to vote. At this he imposed the fine of $20, and the defendant appealed.

HUSBAND AND WIFE MAKE PEACE TERMS

Mrs. Mary Elwell of Rowley did not appear to appear before Judge Morton in the Supreme Court to-day in compliance with an order issued last week, the habeas corpus proceedings begun by her husband, William O. Elwell of Somerville having been abandoned. Elwell and his wife are living apart. He alleged that his wife and her father would not allow him to see his ten-year-old son, Arthur Blackfield Elwell. He is a big manufacturer's home in Rowley. A satisfactory arrangement has been made by the parties, so the proceedings against Mrs. Elwell were dropped.

MUST NOTIFY SHIPPERS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 22.—The Colorado Fuel & Iron Company of Pueblo, Colo., was before the Interstate Commerce Commission suspends increased rate schedules, according to an official decree of the commission to-day.

KILLED ON POLE.

While at work on a pole at Lamartine and Boylston streets, Jamaica Plain, Patrick McCuistle, living at No. 90 South street, received the full voltage of a heavy service wire and was instantly killed.

GRAND TRUNK ASKS POLICE AID TO MOVE FREIGHT

TORONTO July 22.—After a drawn fight for four days between the Grand Trunk Railway and its employes, the general superintendent, W. G. Brownlee, announced at noon to-day that starting to-morrow morning the company would begin a general movement of freight, the very step the strikers have been counting on to prevent as their main chance for victory.

POLICE PROTECTION IS ASKED.

Mr. Brownlee declared that the company had all the necessary men engaged for manning the freight trains. Each one will be in charge of an experienced man. The new men were writing on their examinations to-day.

The Grand Trunk sent out a request to-day to cities and towns where there were any large number of strikers, informing them of their plans for to-morrow and asking police protection.

Already to-day two freight trains, Brownlee reports, left Portland, two left Montreal and one was sent from Ottawa.

Superintendent Gillen left for Sarnia to-day to take charge of freight handling here to-morrow.

The Canadian Northern Railway issued a statement to-day in reply to Vice-President Berry's protest against its men being used to switch trains at the Union Station, which work was formerly done by the Grand Trunk men, and intimating that the C. N. R. men would be called out if it were continued.

The Mackenzie-Mann line replied that its rights of switching, while delegated for convenience here to the Grand Trunk, were not surrendered, and they would continue to do their own switching.

Despite rejection of all peace overtures and terms made by the government, arbitration proposals that will outdo both Grand Trunk officials and the striking employes are being considered to-day. The round officials continued their endeavors to get in touch the wheels of their freight system, while the strikers watched and waited, apparently as confident as ever that no satisfactory freight movement can be secured without them.

Engineers May Join Strike.

A feature of interest in the situation was the possibility of action by United States customs officials to forward bonded freight from the United States now tied up at numerous points on the Grand Trunk line. Striking Grand Trunk trainmen assert that engineers and firemen on the road will strike with them inside of twenty-four hours, practically tying up the passenger as well as freight service of the road.

The feeling exists that if the Grand Trunk is successful in committing this standard wage scale it would open the door for others to make a fight. In Canada the strikers say they will bring to the attention of the Dominion Railway Commission the fact that passenger trains are being operated against the law, being manned by inexperienced men. This may also result in a passenger tie-up.

FEDERAL SUIT FILED AGAINST BATHTUB TRUST

BALTIMORE July 22.—The government filed suit here to-day to dissolve the "Bath Tub Trust," the annual output of which is valued at $100,000,000.

The suit, which was filed in the United States Circuit Court, is in the form of a bill of equity under the Sherman anti-trust act, asking the dissolution of the sanitary iron ware combination made up of sixteen manufacturers.

The bill was filed for Edwin P. Grosvenor, special assistant to the attorney general, and Joseph Darling, special agent of the department.

An investigation disclosed that the sixteen manufacturing firms have entered into a combination controlling the prices and terms of sale of their products throughout the United States. The bill alleges that they compel all jobbers to sign non-bonus contracts as a condition of obtaining their goods and refuse to sell to any one not signing such uniform contracts. They have also advanced prices, it is charged. The companies named are:

The Barnes Manufacturing Company, Mansfield, O.; the Cahill Iron Works, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Colwell Lead Company, New York; the Dey-Ward Company, Warren, O.; Humphreys Manufacturing Company, Mansfield, O.; Kerner Manufacturing Company, Pittsburg; the J. L. Mott Iron Works, New York; McVan-Howell Company, New York; McVay& Walker, Bradock, Pa.; Newhall Sanitary Manufacturing Company, Salem, O.; Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company, Pittsburg; United Sanitary Manufacturing Company, Noblesville, Ind.; United States Sanitary Manufacturing Company, Pittsburg; L. Wolff Manufacturing Company, Chicago; and Rekhtiel & Son Company, Baltimore. Wheeling Enameling Iron Company, Wheeling, Inc.

Proof is in the possession of the government that the glycerine manufacturers gave complete authority to E. L. Wayman, the former secretary of the Enameled Ironware Association, to dictate prices to trade. Wayman is declared himself to the dealers of the country as a licensee and claimed to have purchased all of the patenting patents. He said he had granted licenses to the sixteen companies to manufacture under those patents a product which was to be stamped with a name and grain meaning "Licensed sanitary enameled sanitary enameled ware."

On June 1, Mr. Wayman issued an ultimatum to all "Blue Bird" jobbers in the United States that unless they signed a contract with one of the stamped himself to the to buy exclusively from the trust and be governed by the prices he dictated, they could not purchase at all from the combination.

GEMS OF ANGRY SOCIETY WOMAN SAVED FROM SEA

NEW YORK, July 22.—In the public stores of the custom house to-day there is a beautiful pearl necklace set with diamonds which came near finding a resting place yesterday at the bottom of the North River, just off the White Star pier, where the liner Adriatic had docked. It was not carelessness by which the loss was nearly brought about. The necklace is awaiting escheat.

When the inspectors were looking over the jewelry of Mrs. Stephen H. P. Pell, daughter of Colonel Robert M. Thompson, who arrived on the Adriatic with her mother and tow sons, Mrs. Thompson being dangerously ill, they found the necklace which had been declared. But what attracted the inspectors was four large diamonds set in the necklace of pearls. They had not been declared.

Mrs. Pell said she had bought the diamonds in New York and had taken them abroad when she went overseas last spring. While abroad, she said, she had purchased the pearl necklace and had the four diamonds added to the settings. Therefore, having bought the diamonds in the United States, Mrs. Pell said she had not considered it necessary to declare the gems.

Mrs. Pell Just Declines.

Appraiser Murray Matthies explained to Mrs. Pell that as the diamonds had been reset she would have to pay duty upon them.

"I'll not pay it," Mrs. Pell exclaimed, "because those diamonds were purchased in the United States."

The appraiser attempted to explain.

"And furthermore I'd rather throw the whole thing in the river than pay the tax," she said. Then Mrs. Pell picked up the necklace and started toward the side of the wharf, evidently with a view to carrying out her threat.

Matthies's presence of mind did not desert him. He thought of the value of the necklace, several thousand dollars at least, and the pearls and the fish. Anyway he decided quickly that the river was no place for such a handsome piece of jewelry.

Aha! The Gems Are Saved.

So he accompanied Mrs. Pell on a short trip to the water's edge. He was reasoning and arguing and coaxing and pleading, and he won. Mrs. Pell changed her mind and the necklace was saved.

Now the string of pearls with its settings of diamonds is tucked away in a little plush case in the public store department to be examined later, taking into consideration Mrs. Pell's assertion that she purchased the diamonds here.

MISSISSIPPI BREAKS LOW WATER RECORD

WINONA, Minn., July 22.—The Mississippi River at this point is six inches lower than the former low record of 1864, established in 1894.

TO-NIGHT SEES THE CLIMAX IN BIG WAR GAME

Hovering in Massachusetts Bay, somewhere outside the Boston Harbor, is a mimic armada of battle ships, with decks cleared for action, and ready to wipe Boston off the map, theoretically. Some time to-night the enemy will attempt to get into Boston Harbor, whence the shelling of the city will be easy. It is up to the twelve companies of the Coast Artillery Corps, M. V. M., to defend the city from assault.

Companies manned the batteries at all the forts in the harbor to-day and to-night. If Boston is to be saved from capture, the volunteers will have to do it. As a preliminary to the concentrated attack, the fleet attempted to pass the forts this afternoon. This was to furnish daylight targets for the volunteers, to get practical lessons in range-finding, so they will be prepared to judge of distances to-night under cover of darkness.

A strenuous day was spent giving the militia men tests of all kinds to-day. All through the forenoon the booming of guns sounded like the foal war article, down the harbor. The residents in the Summer resorts in the vicinity of the forts were continually shaken by the force of the shocks. Houses shook and in some cases windows were smashed.

The land reports attracted attention throughout Greater Boston and were due to the service practice of companies of HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, July 22.—The easy marks of the American League made their second appearance of the year on the baseball stage this afternoon. Time was when the Browns were reckoned a husky team to beat, but this year nobody pays any attention to them. They are expected for the next four days to furnish mild amusement for the Red Sox. But you never can tell. These St. Louis worms may turn and wallop the stuffings out of the Red Sox just when our boys are feeling chesty over beating the Tigers four out of five games. It isn't that the Speed Boys will get careless, but the luck of baseball is at least 30 per cent. and that must be figured in calculations.

These Browns have lost fifty-four games so far and won twenty-four. On the face of things they ought to be easy. They are booked for four games and if the Speed Boys don't take at least three of them everybody around these parts will be disappointed, not to say disgusted. Our boys are going along at a two-minute gait with an almost sure chance of landing no worse than second place in the American League race and nearly a 2 to 1 chance of copping the flag. From now on things will be interesting for the Red Sox. Our fellows have the easy Browns to meet for four days here. Then the New Yorks come along for four more days. They will arrive after having played a hard

The wedding of Miss Florence Mary Roche, daughter of Mrs. James Jeffrey Roche, and Admiral Henry Walton Grinnell will be solemnized Monday morning at 9 o'clock in the chapel of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

O'MEARA REFUSES TO POLICE COMMON

Police Commissioner O'Meara made the following statement regarding the policing of Boston Common to the reporters at police headquarters to-day.

Nothing can be done to prevent one person from accosting another unless profane or obscene language is used. I cannot raise the moral tone of the Common. The conditions described there are nothing new. They exist everywhere. The trouble is that a great many innocent people didn't know they existed.

"Such conditions are to be found in all public places. It wouldn't be good policy to take police officers from locations where they are needed and transfre them to other places, because a cry is raised against that particular place."

Asked how many policemen are stationed on the Common at night, Mr. O'Meara stated he didn't know exactly. Plain clothes officers are on duty there at certain house, and numerous officers patrol or cross the Common right along.

Additional facts concerning Boston Common scandal will be found on Page 8.

TAFT GUEST OF THE TOWERS

BAR HARBOR, July 22.—President Taft's vacation cruise is becoming strenuous. He didn't get back aboard the Mayflower until well past 12 o'clock last night but was ashore again at 8 a. m. playing a double round of the nine-half golf course at Kebo Valley.

After the morning of golf came the speaking at noon to far-townspeople followed by a versatile coach ride to Mrs. Mark Hanna's home at Seal Harbor for luncheon.

The dinner engagement for the Taft party to-night is with Mrs. Charlemagne Tower, two miles from Seal Harbor. The President's stay at Bar Harbor proper ended with his engagement to say a few words to the residents on the village green.

The Mayflower with Mrs. Taft and the other members of the party on board sailed to-day for Seal Harbor. Following the luncheon at Mrs. Hanna's the yacht will drop down to the lower piece and anchor for the night.

To-morrow morning the Mayflower will take the party to Mr. Bosser Ferry where a special train will be waiting to convey the President to Bangor where he will arrive at noon for a stay of two hours. Mrs. Taft and the other ladies will stop at Ellsworth to await Mr. Taft's return there late in the afternoon.

More AMERICANS are read in the homes in Boston than any other paper.

FLYERS MEET HERE SEPT. 3

Mayor Fitzgerald has been notified by Frank Bothwell of the Chamber of Commerce that it has been determined to hold an aeronautical exhibition on Soldiers' Field from September 3 to 15.

The indorsement of the Chamber through its executive committee has been given to the affair since the organization believes that the exhibition will prove of advantage to the city.

RAID TO-NIGHT BY ENEMY ON THE HARBOR

volunteers at the forts down the harbor. Two companies were given an opportunity of trying their luck with the full service charges in the twelve-inch guns. The Eighth Company, Captain Dickerman, was taken aboard the General Anderson, was conveyed from Fort Banks to Fort Andrews. The Second Company, Captain Gerlach, will also be allowed to fire the big guns at Fort Andrews.

As it was the last day of real work to-day, the men were given extra work to do. Everything they have learned this week was rehearsed, so that the officers in command believe the subalterns are fully prepared to defend Boston harbor when the hostile fleet appears to-night. The men will literally have to stick to their guns all night to-night, as, of course, the hour of the assault from the water has not been leaked by the enemy.

To-night, according to the arrangement of the war game being played down the harbor, an enemy's fleet is supposed to strike. The 1500 trained artillery men who man Boston harbor fortifications have been reinforced by twelve companies constituting the Coast Artillery Corps, 2000 Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. These Bay State soldiers are said to be officers of the regular army to be as well equipped, disciplined and efficient volunteers as there are in the world. The Coast Artillery Corps is, in fact, one of the finest military organizations of the world.

The United States has always depended upon its volunteers to fight its battles with foreign foes. This country has never had a large regular army. In most European countries all able-bodied young men are expected to serve three years in the regular army. They cannot avoid this service unless they flee from home. Many come to this country to dodge military duty. But there has never been a war in which this country was engaged when it could not raise as big an army as it needed without conscription, except in the Civil War. In that conflict, Uncle Sam was forced in the end to draft recruits. But when the Spanish war began the United States could have put into the field, if all volunteers has been accepted, a force ten times the size it needed.

For a country which depends upon militia for defence, war games are very important. If a foreign fleet should force its way past Boston forts and land an army here everybody in the city would be at the mercy of the invaders. The foes would occupy anybody's home. If they saw fit, and the inhabitants of this city would be exposed to all kinds of insult, robbery and violence. War has become more civilized than formerly and the sacking of a captured city was looked upon as a matter of course. But it will never become humane and the population of captured Boston would be ruled by an enemy's soldiers a very uncomfortable experience. It is to prevent nothing of the kind ever taking place that the war game is being played.

Expert with Big Guns.

The searchlights at all the forts are in perfect working order and it is supposed that the shafts of light they spread over the waters by which this city is approached in ships would disclose any attacking fleet. Then the powerful guns for harbor defence would rain shell and shot upon the enemy. The Coast Artillery Corps and the regulars are splendid hands with big cannon. They can land huge projectiles on small objects at an almost incredible distance. The forts themselves are supposed to be almost impregnable. If dismounted by an enemy they would not be damaged much. If an attempt to carry them by assault was made it is believed they would still be safe and invaders would suffer a terrible loss in killed and wounded.

The attack on the forts are being handled as if the enemy was expected to try to pass the forts in safety and in the battle formation which would bring the most guns into play. But the men behind the guns, the forts, and upon whom the safety of Boston theoretically depends, are not supposed to know upon just which fort the enemy will decide to concentrate its entrance to Boston is being guarded and attack. Every yard of coast which gives patrolled. Garrisons are let be directed as much upon their own foresight and ability to meet emergencies as if the proceedings were real war, grim and bloody, instead of a game. After tonight it will be decided whether the Coast Artillery Corps and the U. S. enlisted men have played the game so well and vigilantly that Boston can be declared safe from imaginary attack, and the defenders winners of a great theoretical battle.

Col. Walter E. Lombard, in command of the Coast Artillery Corps, and his officers and men all want to show that Boston is safe from invasion by sea.

After the Spanish war much was done to straighten harbor defences here. Forts Banks, Heath, Strong, Andrews, Revere and Warren are all regarded by army experts as staunch and well enough equipped to stand the test of actual fighting.

Col. R. E. Patterson U. S. A., and the other officers of the regular army who are stationed around Boston will watch the work of the Massachusetts militiamen tonight with a critical eye. They will notice any defects which volunteers detachments may develop. This game will help make the militia of the Bay State stronger by showing all its weaknesses. They are not much more important and can soon be eliminated.

Massachusetts soldier boys are getting very valuable practice this week in learning how to handle the big guns with speed and accuracy. Their intelligence and interest in the work has won them high praise from regular army officers. Since the Coast Artillery Corps went upon active duty commands have been transferred from fort to fort and the site of the State and U. S. officers has been to make the most of every moment which could be given to training the militiamen in the secrets of warfare.

Big Demand for Firearms.

BERLIN—German gun factories are swamped with orders. Two hundred thousand Mauser rifles were recently delivered to Argentina and an order for a like quantity has been received from Brazil. Other South American states have made smaller contracts. Turkey, Servia and Roumania are buying machine guns and the Chinese commission now in Europe is negotiating for guns and ammunition.

Portuguese Catholics Protest.

LISBON—The Catholics of North Portugal are protesting against King Manuel's censure of Archbishop Braga, who, on orders from the Vatican, suppressed the Franciscan Review as not being necessary to the National Catholic party. A royal decree of July 13 nullified the action and declared that the Archbishop had no right to carry out religious instructions without government consent.

Church to Face Vatican.

ROME—The Protestant committee recently formed here has decided to ask the American Protestant denominations and the Archbishop of Canterbury to join with German and Swiss congregations in the project to erect a Protestant church facing the Vatican as a protest against the papal encyclical on St. Charles Borromeo which offended German Protestants.

Pope Receives Americans.

ROME—The Pope gave private audiences to Bishop Van de Ven of Natchitoches, La., Bishop Donahue of Wheeling, W. Va., and to Mgr. Kennedy, who introduced D. P. Kenny of Plainfield, N. J. The latter thanked the Pontiff for his appointment as Papal Chamberlain.

To Electrify Bavarian Roads.

MUNICH, Bavaria—The Bavarian Diet has appropriated $1,500,000, the first instalment, for electrifying the railroads from Lake Walchen to furnish power to run all the state railroads of Bavaria by electricity. Further appropriations will be made annually.

SPAIN FEARS NEW OUTBREAK

MADRID, July 22.—While the dispute between Spain and the Vatican has been practically settled, there are several points to be cleared up that may result in reopening the whole religious controversy.

The announcement by Prime Minister Canalejas that the Vatican would negotiate on a basis of state control was hailed as a great victory by the anti-Clericals today, while there was corresponding gloom in the religious strongholds. As a result the government is again shifting troops about, fearing the two factions will clash.

"CAD! HE WANTED MONEY," SAYS HEIRESS IN LOVE SUIT

More Letters From Miss Smith to "Ruzzielamb" are Revealed.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Young "Honeylamb," "Ruzzielamb," "Gelebter Selbfriend," "Sweet Boy" "Dear Kid" Russell Griswold of Rowayton, Ct., stands up without wincing under the execration of "puppy lover," "cad" and "bounder" swept upon his glossy blond-haired head by wealthy Helen Woodruff Smith of Stamford.

The former wife of an ex-mayor of Stamford is the defendant in his suit for breach of promise of marriage, alleging that she lured away his boyish affections and that after nine years of playing a youthful, fateful Romeo to her modern Juliet he now humiliatingly with a $50,000 peacetime to his anguished heart.

"It was to be expected that she wouldn't like this whole affair to come out," said he to-day, "and, of course, I guess she's so mad she'd never know anything to do with me again. But I've about me—how about my feelings in all this fuss? They didn't care about me when she turned me away with a flat refusal to marry me after she had kept me dangling along, adoring her ever since I was a boy, and she had learned how to use a razor without cutting half my face off."

Romeo Talks of Suffering.

"She can say what she pleases, but I loved her, and I know she loved me once, and if these letters I have could be got a couple of hundred of them—do not prove that she gave me every encouragement in my infatuation and led me on to think she would marry me, as she finally promised to do. I'd like to know what else they can possibly mean. Well, she's made me suffer, now let her suffer. I don't know where'd be an awful row when this come out. I suppose that if I went up to Stamford or Rowayton just now there'd be a lynching party for me so hard I'd have to take refuge in some tree. My mother told me I'd better not try to get any satisfaction for being jilted. And a few days ago a friend of Mr. Smith met me and grabbed me by the arm and said:

"'Boy, do you know what you are doing?' 'Don't you do it.'

"But he was a friend of hers, not of mine. And I was certainly sore, and I may yet. She got me to love her, and then, after promising to marry me, changed her mind and just threw me away. I'd be a fool to stand for it.

Alas, He Loves Her Yet.

"And the worst of it is," he said: "I love her yet. Yes, I do. I've tried hard not to go on loving her, but I do. It's just the same now as when I was a boy eighteen years old—she's simply produced such a one other woman being able to take her place. Ever since I met her girls of my own age or younger have always seemed foolish and foolish compared to her.

"I know no man would be a hero in the public eye coming out as the plaintiff in a breach of promise suit. But it is the only redress I've got for being badly treated—for spending my youth worshipping a false goddess."

But just hear what Miss Smith has to say now about her Romeolamb. Where some of the letters as given out were shown to her to-day she said she had written none of them with marriage in mind or with romantic intentions.

Only Puppy Love, She Says.

"There is nothing in any of the letters," said Mrs. Smith, "to suggest anything more serious than puppy love. Griswold is an ungrateful young cad. It is against men of his caliber that we should be protected. Scrutinizing would be too good for him, and I don't know that I'd be sorry if he got a good trouncing.

"That boy has been trying for months to get into my estate, and for what I succeed this way any better than he did with his other little devices. I got tired taking care of beggars like him and got rid of him. I suppose that if I had continued to give him money this would never have happened.

"But he'll never get another cent out of me. I am not to be frightened in that way. As for those letters that this young cad tries to bolster up his suit with, they were just the letters of a mature woman to a kid. I like to write letters and I like to get them, but when letters get cold they represent nothing. You won't find anything about marriage in any of them. The boy never even proposed to me. He was inclined to be sentimental, but I refused to meet him on that ground. I told him repeatedly that I would not marry the best man on earth.

Asked a Loan of $600.

"I have known Griswold several years. I met him through his mother and was kind to him. I introduced him to friends of mine, who helped him with his music, and to people whose acquaintance and friendship would be valuable to him. From time to time I assisted him financially. I would give him small sums of money for bills of that purpose. Once when he was in the Stamford Hospital for an operation for appendicitis I advanced him $300.

"A few weeks ago he asked me to lend him $600. I refused to do it and he became angry. He mentioned in terms of some of my personal friends in a gossipy way and I told him to leave the house and never come back to me. I am well rid of him, but I dislike all this notoriety. It has nothing at stake. I made him socially, ten by Miss Smith to Griswold came to light to-day. One of the earliest letters that "Ruzzie" got from "Brunhilde"—in 1902, when the razor smote only pin feathers from his chin—is written on a bit of torn letterhead bearing a Viggo etching of St. Peter's dome and the lettering "Roma."

Walking Arm-in-Arm.

In the foreground of the etching "Brunhilde" had sketched in the figures of a man and a woman walking arm in arm, and the wrote:

"Not ROMA, but Stamford.

Perhaps some day we shall be on our way to St. Peter's like the little Russell and his Brunhilde in this picture! In the meantime we will enjoy the ramparts of Stamford and Rowayton! So dry the tears my sweet little boy, for there's honey in my heart for you. Next Saturday!

"There is the drawing of a heart pierced by an arrow and the ground of an eye followed by a big K, which, Griswold says, in her cipher meant "I like."

"Brunhilde" has by December 11, 1908, acquired many playful epithets, as shown in this letter of that date:

"Ach Meiner Gliebster Siegfried: Thank you many times for prompt attention for the favor asked, and in addition the charming note which I was looking for and "Ich made me to laugh." But I was sorry to hear of another cold—at last? Miss is still with me, so I have not had to get another! I am going to the city tomorrow shopping and piano recital at Cavanigel, coming home afterward. I wish you were coming all me. When you can get over to these diggins let me know and I'll be on deck. Always, always your faithful

HINKEY LAMB ones, SUNDONNET SELL (by request). FOOL OLD PAL (popular), QUEEN OF THE CABIN (sodden heard).

Yours all right.

HILLIE.

"Gelleber" got a sad little letter from Denver at a time, he says, when Brunhilde was seeking a divorce:

Denver, May 23, 1907.

Gelleber Siegfried—All your letters are with me safe at last, and to-day the most beautiful of all. Thank you one thousand and one times for all these dear messages, and if you have waited in vain for a response it was on account of my travelling about and my fear to write at this present time. All my letters were held up for twenty-two days by the absence of my attorney from Sioux Falls, and now when you write, and please—please do send two envelopes—the outside readdressed to Mrs. R. L. [illegible] Franklin street, Denver, Col. You need not put an inside one unless you wish to, as Kitty always hands over unsealed and New York mail unopened.

Be sure to destroy, burn, forget my whereabouts and do not say I am here, or anywhere unless in a vagrant way. Well, Dear Boy, I'll say good-by. Evelyn Thaw did, I don't know." This may seem unimportant to you, but it is vitally important just at this stage of my "troubles." Later I could make more clear to you later. Do this for me, Kid, please, by all this dead in past, present, or time to come. Yo gods—If the fall ever does come! I take the homebound train, and we will celebrate, you bet. This wait is killing. I manage to keep busy here every minute of an helping Kittie keep house, and that helps me from despairing reflections, which this could go by wireless, for I long to have you know that it was the pen and not the heart that was cold and silent. But you know that is beats eighteen to the dozen for you, and that I am, not for as always, your

GIRL WALKS 293 MILES IN 11 DAYS

Fourteen-year-old Mildred R. Belknap is at her home in Dorchester to-day after completing a 293-mile walk in nine full and three half-days through the mountainous section of Maine and New Hampshire.

Miss Belknap was accompanied by her father, Charles E. Belknap. She covered the long journey to see the country more than for making records. During the trip when she stopped, after walking only during the forenoon, she was visiting relatives.

Miss Belknap has been prominent in many other long distance walks, her most recent one being May 30, when she covered 108 miles in fifty-two hours. The walk she just finished was the first attempt since May 30, and she was much pleased over the result of it, because she started that she so much things of interest.

The temperature on July 9, the first day of her trip, near Intervale postoffice, Maine, was 102 degrees. She started from Portland and continued to Auburn, which is about thirty miles over the route she and her father walked.

PICKS UP SNAKE; FAINTS.

KINCHENDON, July 22.—Miss Alberta Savage, twenty-two years old, Glenalbyn sweet, was given a fright when she picked up a large blacksnake while picking berries in a pasture. After running about 100 feet she fell in a faint by the roadside.

22 HATS AND 17 GOWNS IN HER LUGGAGE

NEW YORK, July 22.—Mrs. Queenie Hayes, who is pretty and pleasingly plump and young and a blonde has arrived from Europe accompanied by her husband, Frank Hayes, who is in the lumber business in Oregon and is said to be wealthy. In addition to a husband, Mrs. Hayes brought back the following items:

Seven extra large-size wardrobe trunks. Twenty-two hat boxes.

Seventeen Paris gowns valued at $10,000 just by themselves.

Twenty-two of the nearest millinery creations ever seen in these parts.

Enough full of fine lingerie, all ribbons and ruffles and stuff and things.

The most extensive collection of lapdogs yet exhibited on a New York pier.

Everything else you could think of.

Mrs. Hayes attracted a lot of attention as she came down the gang plank of the White Star liner Adriatic wearing one of the flared-shaped French gowns and a huge scoop bonnet shaded by a dense grove of ostrich weepers, but she attracted even more notice when the baggage began to pile up in a rather mountain alongside order and the customs inspectors got busy.

Acting Deputy Collector O'Connor and two assistants spent three hours going through little Mrs. Hayes's luggage. They took out blue gowns, green gowns, pink gowns, white gowns until one of the deck hands looked like a pillow. They examined the like of which was never seen by the eye of man before, and they checked off 140 on them as big as a man's fist.

WOMAN AVIATOR, WHO WILL ATTEMPT CHANNEL FLIGHT

Mme. Franck.

WOMAN READY FOR SKY TRIP OVER CHANNEL

CALAIS, France, July 22.—Mme. Mathilde Franck, wife of an English journalist and one of the most daring women aviators in the world, will compete in the 1000 miles aeroplane race between New York and Chicago. She made this announcement to-day when she arrived from Paris to undertake a flight in a Farman biplane across the English Channel.

"I hope that my entry will be accepted," said Mme. Franck, who is private life is Mrs. Frank Hesselton. "I am confident that I could cover the distance especially in view of the conditions involving several days for the completion of the race. That $25,000 prize is one I would like to win."

Contrary winds prevented her from starting this morning on the cross-channel flight, but she said that a start would be made as soon as possible. Her machine was carefully gone over and she made a short mad flight without attempting anything spectacular.

THE TONIC YOU NEED

If You Are Thin, Weak and Pale, Is the Remedy That Cured This Massachusetts Woman Who Was Tired, Worn Out and Discouraged.

Many people who are in a chronic condition of ill health really need nothing more than a tonic.

It is the blood that is at fault and with the vital fluid scanty, lacking in richness or purity, there are frequently produced an alarming lot of symptoms all of which will disappear when the blood is again built up.

The name anemic has been given to the condition when the blood is thin and poor. It is a Greek word and means simply "too little blood." The patient is fatigued after slight exertion and the least exercise results in shortness of breath. It is a condition which always brings on a fear of consumption and it advances so gradually that its progress is seldom noticed until it is well established.

The one remedy for a bloodless condition is more blood. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the great blood-maker, have accomplished so many cures.

Mrs. L. Lipman, of No. 210 Bryant street, Malden, Mass., suffered for nearly four years from anemia. She says:

"For nearly four years I suffered from anemia, which was brought on by overwork. I was very weak and thin, had no color and my ears were transparent. My blood did not seem to circulate, even when I rubbed my hands briskly there would be no warmth or color. I had severe bilious attacks which were followed by dizzy spells and terrible sick headaches. My rest did nothelp me and I was always tired and worn out. I was so discouraged that I became very nervous and received so little help from the doctor's medicine that I quit taking it.

"My home was in London, England, at the time of my sickness and I was treated at two hospitals. The physicians there said I had anemia but I did not seem to get any better. Through a friend I was encouraged to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They were just what I needed for I soon gained in flesh and began to pick up in every way. I continued using the pills for some time and am in good health now."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," is free on request.

DR. CRIPPEN SLIPS AWAY FROM FRANCE

PARIS, July 2.—Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen, the American sought in connection with the death of his wife, Belle Elmore, the vaudeville actress, in London, is believed to have eluded the French police. A dispatch received from the Tarascon department of Ariege says that a man answering in many details the description of the wanted man, so far as it is known to the police of southern France, crossed the border into Spain on July 20.

The French police were out a few hours behind him, but his skilful use of strategy was sufficient to enable him to make his escape. It is regarded as probable that he will take refuge in the republic of Andorra, and if so does not extradition will be difficult.

Efforts are being made today to identify the girl who committed suicide at Harrington Hotel on July 13 as Ethel Clara Le Neve, the friend who disappeared with Crippen.

Word came from London to-day that the detective had evidence in hand to spend a doubt that Dr. Crippen killed his wife. This evidence consisted of the finding of Belle Elmore's jewelry and a report by Dr. Pepper, the expert of medical jurisprudence, that the body found buried in the Crippen house was undoubtedly that of a woman. Dr. Pepper made his report after a thorough examination and analysis of the body. Before his finding was made public it was feared the prosecution would be unable to establish any sort of a corpus delicti.

The finding of the jewelry forms one of the strongest links in the chain of circumstantial evidence against Dr. Crippen. Mrs. Crippen's jewelry was missed after Mrs. Crippen's disappearance. Since the finding of the body detectives in the employ of Scotland Yard have been going through the district of London and today they came upon some of them still in the possession of a woman to whom they had been left with him by a man answering the description of Dr. Crippen.

STEEPLEJACK FALLS FROM 60-FOOT POLE

CHICAGO, July 23.—After twenty years' work as a "steeplejack" engaged in the occupation of painting flag poles on skyscrapers, Charles Quodbach, forty-seven years old, fell from the top of the sixty-foot flagpole at the American League Park, and it is believed he will not recover. Just before the accident Quodbach had treated a crowd of spectators, who stood below in the street, to an exhibition of aerobatic feats.

PATROLMAN WHO KILLED MAN JUSTIFIED

Judge Preble, in the Charlestown court today, declared Patrolman Dennis Leary was justified in using his revolver at the time he shot and killed William Deegan and shot John J. Anderson and Robert J. Verner during a row on Chelsea street bridge on Sunday, July 10. Judge Preble said Verner is to blame for the death of Deegan, who was Verner's brother-in-law.

"It is the duty of every citizen to assist an officer and not to attempt to get a pistol away from him," said Judge Preble from the bench. "Whether the officer was right or wrong in making the arrest is a thing to be decided in court. To my mind, he was justified in using his revolver. He used his revolver with reasonable discretion. Verner is to blame for the death of his friend. The officer was in the right."

"These other two men were shot by the officer. They suffered considerably and will continue to suffer. I will take this into consideration when I sentence them."

Anderson, who lives at No. 7 Cook court, Somerville, and Verner, who lives at No. 24 Bow street, Somerville, each was charged with attempting to receive a pistol under assault and battery on the patrolman. On each charge the men were given six months in the House of Correction, making a year in all for each. Both appealed. Each was held in $500 for court.

The Grand Jurors of Suffolk county have taken into consideration when I sentence them."

Albert Johnson of No. 545 Shawmut avenue, who was charged with assault and battery on the patrolman, was sentenced to serve six months in the House of Correction. He appealed and was held in $500 for the Superior Court.

ASKS COURT TO PREVENT STRIKE

The Suffolk Superior Court was today asked to prevent a threatened strike of photo-engravers in their shops when Edward S. Sanford of Boston filed a bill against Charles E. Lewis and John Macafee, officers, and the members of the Photo-Engravers Union, No. 3 of Boston, and Louis Kolodzey of Chicago and D. J. Grady of Brooklyn, New York, officers of the union, the order, temporarily in Boston. The plaintiff firm refused to organize its shop and claims the defendants have ordered a strike at the factory on Monday next. The case was heard by Judge Richardson. This restrains the defendants from striking until Tuesday next, when the court has acted upon the matter.

EXAMINE INDIANS FOR CITIZENSHIP

WASHINGTON, July 22.—To determine the extent of white blood in the veins of Umatilla reservation in Oregon are capable of bearing the personal responsibilities of citizenship, the Interior Department has appointed a commission, consisting of three white men, to take testimony on the reservation. The members of the commission are F. J. Somerville of Pendleton, Ore., Edwin L. Sauerzapfen, superintendent of the Umatilla Indian School, and Charles H. McChesney special Indian agent.

FREIGHT RATES NOT TO BE BOOSTED YET

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The proposed rate increases on the Western trunk line railroads have been suspended until November 15. This agreement was reached today by Chairman Knapp of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, and members of the Western Trunk Line Committee. It is stipulated that no advance in rates shall be made pending the hearing. Today's agreement relates to rates between Chicago and the Missouri River.

WAKE UP ROOSTER, LOST $2,500 BARN

MONTCLAIR, N. J., July 22.—Charles H. Cudd has a rooster that hates to be awakened from its sleep, and when James Sullivan, the watchman, went through the brewery with a lighted lamp the enraged bird flew at him.

The lamp broke on the floor, set fire to the room and spread to the barn. By the time the blaze was out it had done $2,500 damage.

MARSHALL TO RETURN HERE TO-MORROW

John R. Marshall, wanted in Boston as member of the $100,000 bond robbery gang, who was yesterday held in $100,000 by the Federal Court in Philadelphia, charged with being a fugitive from justice in this State, is expected to arrive in Boston to-morrow morning. He will be given another hearing to-day in Philadelphia. This hearing will be on the indictment pending against him here, charging him with conspiracy with "Big Bill" Kelther and Martin Walsh in aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in the misappropriation of the funds of the wrecked National City Bank of Cambridge.

At the federal building today it was said that Marshall would not put up any fight. It is known that he is without money, and directly after the hearing this noon to-day he will be started to Boston. When Marshall arrives here he will be handed before the officers in charge of the prosecution of the lone gang, and an attempt will be made to get from him a confession as to the whereabouts of Martin Walsh. The detectives say that although he is the smallest kind of a bird, and they are after the big game.

Credit for the capture of Marshall, who is wanted by Federal officers for more than $100,000 in bonds, is due to Special Agent Frederick H. Kimball and his son in Boston. Marshall was traced through the smallest kind of a clew. The officers had been watching Mrs. Nellie Penn, Marshall's companion, without result for some time, and on the day sent a mail case purporting to contain the belongings of Marshall from the Northampton street residence to Yarmouth port.

The officers followed the mail case. While they were at the South station a trunk in the Back Back station and checked it to Philadelphia. They then judged one of the right they would have found Marshall.

Kimball and his son then got a trunk to Philadelphia, and the capture of Marshall

BRITISH ADMIRAL MARKHAM, HIS WIFE AND DAUGHTER

NO AIRSHIPS FOR WAR USE

Admiral Sir Albert Markham of Great Britain, who has arrived in New York on his way to Great Barrington, this State, says that aeroplanes will never take the place of battleships.

"While airships will be invaluable as scouts in time of war, battleships will always remain the first line of England's defence, and all this talk about German invasion of England by aeroplanes is as silly as the anecdotes themselves," he says.

Admiral Markham, who was accompanied by his wife and his little nine-year-old daughter, Joy Markham, is on his way to Great Barrington to spend a couple of months with Dr. and Mrs. Fred- erick W. Pierson.

"I think the fault in the size of battleships," he remarked, "has been reached. They should not build them any larger than the Dreadnought, as that type of war vessel is the best to handle in time of war, and I think that a 20,000 ton ship is ideal.

"Coming back to airships, I don't believe a battleship could be hit by a shot from an aeroplane, except by the merest accident, and the aeroplane has to pass through several zones of devilish speed before it conquers the air sufficiently to be a dependable instrument in war.

"Larger naval armament is the best peace preserver a nation can have, and, there- fore, the larger navies are built the more likelihood there is of peace being main- tained. But don't let the Kaiser hear me. I am sure no one dreads war more than I do."

WOMAN MUST SELL ICE TO LAWYER CARR

Lawyer Edward Carr, a Boston attorney, scored a victory in the Suffolk Superior Court to-day when Judge Richardson ordered Mrs. Madira Woods, who runs the only ice business in the town of Hopkinton, to deliver ice to Mr. Carr when ever he would go out to the cart and pay for it. Judge Richardson ruled that Ice is a necessity, and that Mrs. Woods is compelled to sell it to whomsoever tenders money for it, but that she is not pod to carry it into the house.

Mrs. Woods was in court to-day to reconsol to a bill filed recently by Attorney Carr, in which he asked for an injunction to restrain her from refusing to sell ice to him. Mr. Woods finally agreed to deliver forty pounds of ice a week to the Carrs, within fifty feet of their Cedar street house, when the cars stops at the house of Mrs. Linane. Through her attorney Mrs. Woods admitted that she delivered ice into the home of the Linanes, but declined to take it into the Carr house, and said she would compel them to come out to the ice cart and get it.

Deny Carr Owed Back Bill.

Mr. Carr claimed that the reason why Mrs. Woods refused to sell him ice was because of his activity in town affairs, whereby her son, a Fairmount man, had sustained a loss. This Mrs. Woods denied, and said that Mr. Carr owed her a back bill for ice. Carr denied owing a back bill.

When Mrs. Woods was asked why her objection there was to delivering ice to the Carrs, Mrs. Woods' attorney said:

"The defendant is at all times ready to deliver ice to Mr. Carr, and is only willing to tender it a proper sum for it, at the cart. Mrs. Woods will not carry the ice to his house because she refused to pay a back bill for ice. If he will bring 5, 10 or 25 cents for the bill of ice he can get ice, but all the ice he wants.

Mrs. Woods' lawyer said: "We question said they everything which Mrs. Woods's attorney has said. Mr. Carr and members of his family have repeatedly gone to the cart and paid for ice, but he finds myself the ice in the refrigerator and replaces the money.

"Without waiving any rights addressing the defendant, I believe that they should deliver ice for the present to Mr. Carr from the cart."

The suit is satisfactory to us," said Mr. Carr's attorney. "All we want is ice. We are willing to pay for it and go into the store to get it."

$400 ROBBERY IN MALDEN APARTMENTS

False boy workers in an apartment house at No. 74 Eastern avenue, Malden, made a haul estimated today at $400 by the police. Clarence H. Tenney finds among articles missing from his apartment six rings, three stickpins, two gold bracelets, three cuff buttons and a gold mineral drinks valued at $200. Warren H. Foot lost a gold watch, a gold bracelet, a gold neck chain and cuff links, and places his loss at $100.

TO FUMIGATE CRUISER.

When the cruiser Des Moines, which sailed from Central American ports several days ago, arrives in Boston harbor she will be fumigated and the crew will be landed at Gallop's Island while the ship is being fumigated. There is no fear of the danger of contagion after her stay to the southward.

COVENT GARDEN JOINS BOSTON IN OPERA POOL

LONDON, July 22—The negotiations which have been going on for some time between Mr. Gatti-Casazza and Alfred Selsbury, representing the Metropolitan Opera on the one hand, and Thomas Quinlan, manager for Thomas Beecham, on the other, have now been concluded with the result that an announcement has been made of a combination which amounts to nothing less than the complete upheaval of the whole English operatic system.

Mr. Beecham has taken Drury Lane Theatre, the interior of which will be rebuilt next Spring, when the Beecham Opera Company will open with a galaxy of stars, such as New York is accustomed to, but which is unprecedented in London.

The list of artists engaged include Mesdames Melba, Geraldine Farrar, Mary Garden, Cavalieri, Olive Fremstadt, Schuman-Heink, Alda, Mignon, Nevada, Louise Homer, and Caruso, Challapine, Dalmores, Sealroff, Amico, Scotti, Gilbert and Allan Hinckley. The engagement of many of these artists was only rendered possible by what is described as a definite amalgamation of Mr. Beecham's forces with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

A Regular Opera Pool.

Not only is the joint engagement of the artists on some basis of exchange part of the agreement, but it is declared that common possession will render available for the opera houses of London, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston their vast stock of scenery, dresses and other stage property. Moreover, by a system of co-operation rather than of competition much better arrangements with the publishers for the production of new works in the interest of the public will be possible.

Seeing that Mr. Beecham is as yet only a newcomer in the field of opera, the amount of scenery, stage properties and such accessories at his disposal cannot be on anything like as great as that which the Metropolitan can command, so that it is to be assumed that he will put up some financial equivalent. Nothing is said of this, however, in the announcement made here.

Ballet From St. Petersburg.

It is stated that "Tosca-hui will assist Mr. Beecham as conductor," and one of the most interesting items of the announcement is that the Beecham season will include the appearance of the complete Russian ballet from the Imperial Opera of St. Petersburg, which has been appearing at the Paris Opera.

If the arrangement between the Metropolitan Opera and Mr. Beecham extends to the point of securing this ballet of Diaghi's for a season in New York, it will have accomplished what a large number of American impresarios have been trying in vain to do.

Mr. Beecham is a son of Joseph Beecham, the English pill manufacturer, and he has conducted two seasons of opera in London. Last Winter he produced Strauss's "Elektra" at Covent Garden for the first time in England, and during the present season at His Majesty's he has produced several other new operas. The company will remanage at Drury Lane next Spring will play against the Covent Garden season.

A week or so ago it announced that he would give opera in New York, and that he had attempted to get the Manhattan Opera House. This he found impossible because of the agreement between Oscar Hammerstein and the Metropolitan Opera Company.

NIGHT SCENES SHOW NEED OF PARK POLICE

Idleness and license reigned last night on Boston Common. In all the evening and night but one policeman was seen in the famous reservation and he was lounging along with a civilian friend apparently the least concerned as to what was taking place.

Police Commissioner O'Meara's now celebrated dictum that "It is not a violation of law to be dirty, or rude, or vulgar, to 'loaf' on benches or in the paths, to be noisy up to a certain point or to be under the influence of liquor short of intoxication, to be 'offensive' or 'disgusting' in appearance," was surely taken advantage of last night.

Frowsy men, dirty men, men of the decklet class, were everywhere.

Chance Trysting Place.

Women of all types were on the Common early in the evening. Many merely hurried through the historic enclosure to their homes from work or from their homes to night employment. But as the night fell women who loitered and who would talk or walk with any one, almost, became more numerous. Then, indeed, there were few respectable Boston women who showed confidence in Commissioner O'Meara's confident assertion that a woman could go free from the danger of insult on a well-lighted pathway as she would be in one of the city's crowded thoroughfares.

As the hours wore on the place began to take on the appearance of a chance trysting reservation, a tramp's open-air sleeping place, a section where almost any act might go with safety perpetrated for there were no officers of the law anywhere visible to enforce the peace and the law.

Men from the by-ways of life, sunk to the Common from the four points of the compass. Whither they came one might not guess. They seemed to spring into being with the shadows and they seemed to disappear with the gloom rather than the sunshine.

All through the famous old public beds, on benches and on the grass men were to be found. Some of them huddled on the benches.

Young men and young women and older men and women strolled through the Common and many an acquaintance was made.

Many Sailors There.

Young girls, girls almost of tender years, chose the reservation as a favorite walking place and few left the Common unaccompanied when they did depart. Scores of sailors and marines from the different warships in the harbor made the Common their destination. A call to quarters would seem to have gathered only a fair short of a ship's company of blue-jackets in port.

Many of these men were seen greeting girls. Groups of sailors and girls were here, there and almost everywhere. In one instance one pretty girl far from being out of her teens was seen entertaining a half-dozen blue-jackets.

While the Common was quiet by 10 o'clock it was the one place where a man would have permitted his mother, wife, sister or sweetheart to cross from one end to the other unmolested.

No Police Restraint.

There was no police restraint, nothing to suggest the protection and watchfulness of the fabled "strong arm of the law."

The lying on the grass of the double-decker hose on the eastern side of the Common made that portion undesirable and impossible as sleeping quarters for the crowds but the western side of the central path was populated by loungers, sleepers and loiterers from sun set till midnight.

Undoubtedly any man "under the influence of liquor short of intoxication" or "offensive" and "disgusting" and "noisy" to a degree, could have been put out by police interference was concerned, for of police protection there was none.

That the Common is the nightly lodging place of many and that the most serious violations of law are but too usual is the declaration of Dr. McFarland, an attendant at the historic field. He mentioned two instances of theft in the past week and several complaints which have never come to the public ear.

McFarland said that the Board of Health had been asked to clean up the Common because of the lawlessness and abuses of its privileges by those who frequent the Common.

"You can see who and what are here, to-night," said the attendant. "It is a hundred times worse on hot, sultry nights."

Need Five Policemen.

"There should be five policemen, at least, on duty, especially during the nights at this period of the year," said Attorney Fitzgerald in explaining a letter to Mayor Fitzgerald in complaining of the condition of that old field and has helped to make Boston famous the world over.

"I am thoroughly convinced that we need great police protection in Franklin Square at night, and it is my belief that the same is true of the Common, especially for the park and the patrolling of Hinckley Square would be much improved the Rev. George L. Perin of Franklin Square House. "To better protect the many children and women while crossing this square will not be necessary to add a large number to the benches to fully protect them from the acts of shocking nature are perpetrated here, apparently with utter freedom."

BANDIT HOLDS UP MILK CART

NORTH ANDOVER, July 22—Edward Powers, a driver for the J. W. Chadwick Milk Company of West Boxford, was held up at the point of a revolver by a highwayman on the main road near Lake Cochichewick, early today. The bandit, however, was scared away by an autoist.

According to Powers he was driving along when the intruder stepped out from the bushes and asked for a ride. Powers pulled up his horse, and in an instant the stranger produced a revolver, saying "Throw up your hands." Just at that time William Byers of the town, happened by in his auto, and the highwayman, fearing that Powers would call for help, fled into the woods. He also fired two shots that entered the top of the wagon. The highwayman is described as being about twenty-two years old, red dish complexion, with red hair.

RARE BOOKS AT BIG PRICES

LONDON, July 2—Valuable old and modern books, sold at Sotheby's, brought good prices, as follows:

J. W. Turner's "Liber Studiorum," original issue, $3950 Shakespeare's poems, 1640, a rare edition with many pieces falsely attributed to Shakespeare, $570; a quarto, "Horae Beatae Mariae Virginis sed Tum et Secundum Consuetudinem Ecclesiae Sarisburiensis cum Calendario," 1514, richly illuminated manuscript on velum, $2900; Captain John Smith, "The General Historie o Virginia, New England and the Summer Isles," 1624, $240; a number of pamphlets on America of about the time of the Revolution, $27.50; "The History of the Province of New York From the First Discovery to the Year 1732," first edition, printed in 1755, $102.50; Comenius's "Hyperorbium sive Pellipsis," date 1499, $725; Magnus Aurelius Cassiodorus's "Liber Virtorum Fruitorum," from the monastic library of S. Edmundsburg, $400; "The Explanations of Secrets in the Prophet," by Hieroymus, from the same library, $305, and S. Augustine's "Opus sua Varia," $255.

PACKERS UNDER FEDERAL FIRE

CHICAGO, July 22—Managers of packing house departments are under fire before the Federal Grand Jury in the government beef trust investigation to-day, according to reports at the Federal building. The utmost secrecy is observed in the proceedings.

It was said that managers of the National Packing Company would have to explain certain evidence with regard to their agreements with rivals and their methods of unfair competition. The Government attorneys are working with a view to indicting the officials who are said to have aided in formulated the great meat combine which has controlled the output, the receipts and the price of the product.

Committees from the East have taken the witness stand before the grand jury and told of alleged agreements that are made between agents for the packing company and wholesale meat dealers.

TWO HURT WHEN BIG HOTEL BURNS

HOQUIAM, Wash., July 22—The Hoquiam Hotel was destroyed by fire early to-day, and only a change of wind saved the business section of the town from what seemed certain destruction. All guests of the hotel, about a dozen in number, were obliged to leap from the windows. Charles G. Regeuin, and Look Wing, the hotel cook, were badly hurt by jumping, and were also seriously burned. The damage will exceed $100,000.

TRAIN'S VICTIM WAS A CATTLE TENDER

The man who was struck by a train while walking in the Boston & Maine tracks near Littleton, and died on his way to the Massachusetts General Hospital, is not Frank Vere Harding, as first reported, but, as first believed, but an employe of his, named Joe Shirley. When Shirley was picked up he was unconscious. A special train was made up and a record run was made to the North Station. As the man was being taken to the hospital ance, he died. The correct identification was made to-day.

WINTHROP CHURCH TO HOLD LAWN PARTY

The annual lawn party and reunion of the parish of St. John the Evangelist, Winthrop, will take place tomorrow on the church lawn, corner of Winthrop and Lincoln streets. The rector, the Rev. John H. Griffin, and his assistant, the Rev. Daniel F. Sullivan, have the assistance of a large number of the ladies, who are working with energy to make the affair a success. The event is the parish calendar. Games of all kinds for the young people, including a large orchestra, athletic events for both boys and girls, refreshment booths under the trees, Japanese stands, gypsies and their tent mysteries, fortune tellers and other attractions. The illumination of the grounds in the evening, are the attractions held out by the pastor and his band of earnest subordinates. Father Griffin hopes to have the largest crowd yet got together for a parish lawn party.

UNDERTAKER FINED FOR MOVING A BODY

Joseph W. Wilson, an undertaker in Dedham, was fined $20 in Roxbury Court to-day for removing to Dedham the body of Peter Delaney, a child who died in the Children's Hospital, without a permit from the Boston Board of Health. The law says that a body cannot be removed from a city or town into another city or town without permission of the Board of Health.

MILWAUKEE TO GIVE CHILDREN PRIZES

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 22—Prizes for children, in connection with keeping the streets of Milwaukee clean and the elevation of the white wings, giving trustworthy ones power of arrest for violation of health ordinances, are among the recommendations embraced in a special message of Mayor Seidel Oscar Buchstaller, who he will have printed and sent to every member of the Common Council to-day.

"The place to begin is with the child," says the Mayor. "The boy and girl can be an auxiliary to our street cleaning forces. Let us reward the child and add to the greatest extent in removing litter from the streets, alleys or vacant lots."

FREE FLIES TO DESTROY MOTHS

Satisfied that the assistants fly will prove of great value in destroying the pipes and brown-tail moths, the State forestry department is releasing them, together with thousands of the cabbage moths, in various infested sections of the Commonwealth. The first of these flies were planted at Dedham and Westwood, with a number of the beetles. The flies are no bigger than a pin-head.

$4,489 FUND FOR VICTIMS OF FIRE

The funds for the relief of the Campello sufferers amounts to $4,489.01. The relief committee, which was appointed by Mayor Fitzgerald, consisting of Bernard J. Rothwell, James M. Morrison, Alexander Mellregor, George J. Raymond and Richard Grogler, have been making appeals for contributions and report a generous response on the part of Boston people.

series with the Tigers, who have just left us and we all hope that Jennings's crew will give the Yanks several knockouts. Know.

Eddie Cicotte, the knuckleball artist has been on edge for several days expecting to have to pitch against the Detroits. But he was not called upon, so is in excellent shape to trim the Browns in the opening game this afternoon in case Manager Donovan calls upon him. He certainly ought to walk away with his game in the style so that on Saturday Charlie Smith who has been clamping at the bat, can get busy for a win.

How easy it is for everybody except the manager to dope these things out in advance. Then how often does the dope go astray. A wild pitch, a fumbled grounder, a close decision against you and the whole thing goes wrong. But here's hoping the Speed Boys make a further clean-up, winning at least three out of the four games scheduled with the Browns.

RED SOX ARE EVEN MONEY CHOICE FOR SECOND POSITION

Do you think the Red Sox are going to win the pennant? Yes? Well then it is a good chance to pick up a little money if you are a good gambler and want to back up your opinion, for any one will lay you even money that the Athletics, or if you still think the Quakers are bound to tumble, will send you along at even money against the field as they are going to the Athletics anyway.

The Doves face the Cubs in the second game on the Windy City team's grounds, and its almost as even a bet that they will get even with the leaders of the league by nosing them out. That is of to loss yesterday at the start of the series was nothing to be ashamed of, considering the class they were up against, and Manager Lake is keeping his men in the same stride they struck while visiting the Pirates.

The team put up a grand battle in the first set-up and had the Cubs seared every inch of the way, the result always leading in doubt.

The present series is the hardest the Doves will have to contend with before nearing the home goal again and will make the Cubs move their fastest to get any advantage. Hunter Cole will probably try his speed and curves on the home team to-day.

That daring Tris Speaker took a desperate chance to steal third base in the fifth inning of the final game with the Tigers, but was nipped by a close margin only by a perfect throw of Stanage, one of the best shooting backstops in the business.

HONUS' WAGNER CAST IN BRONZE

Baseball fans are to have an opportunity to buy copies of the bronze likeness of Honus" Wagner, by W. Clarke Noble, the eminent Boston sculptor, and presented to the famous Pittsburg shortstop as a token of esteem from his teammates. Mr. Noble recently conceived the idea of making originals of some of the more prominent of the major league baseball stars, and spoke to Manager Clarke of the Pittsburg team about it. Mr. Clarke was greatly pleased with the idea and ordered the likeness.

The statuette is about sixteen inches high, and is an excellent likeness of the famous ball-tosser, every detail of facial and batting characteristics having been carefully studied by the sculptor and brought out in the cast. It is proposed putting these on the market in the near future, and later Mr. Noble will probably make statuettes of other famous players.

H. S. VANDERBILT AND YACHT AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., July 22.—With its owner, Harold Sterling Vanderbilt, aboard, the schooner yacht Vagrant, winner of the 600-mile New York-Bermuda race, in which a score of yachts competed, arrived at Newport Harbor at 9 o'clock this morning, and what members of society who happened to be astir flocked to the docks to get a first glimpse of the craft.

The boat, which was built lately completed, will proceed to Bristol, where the cabins will be brought to a state of completion and other work done before reaching Harold S. Vanderbilt is the erstwhile adopted son of Elsinor Beach.

COLLINS LOSES TO WILEY IN HOT RACE

NEW HAVEN, July 22.—In a twenty-mile motor-paced bicycle race at Light-house point, George Wiley of Syracuse, N. Y., defeated Elmer Collins of Boston by almost a lap in the fast time of 30m. 13s. Collins held the lead for fifteen miles, six laps, and then Wiley passed him. Collins lost his pace and was unable to get it again.

In the five-mile race Vanani, the champion of Italy, defeated Clarence Carmen and Frank Galvin, both of Newark, N. J. Vanoni won by thirty-five yards.

C. E. NEWCOMB WINS EASTERN HANDICAP

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—The Eastern handicap, the concluding event in the three days' target tournament at Lder Hill, was won by Charles E. Newcomb of this city, who tied at 97 with H. H. Engle of New York and won the shoot-off in 10 to 15. Engle, a Philadelphia professional, was high gun in the event with 98, out was ineligible for the prize, which was open only to amateurs.

George E. Ellmer, Jr., the Yale student, who won the preliminary event, had his handicap raised to nineteen yards, and was only able to break 93 out of his 100 targets.

PHIL CROSS SCORES TWO KNOCKDOWNS

NEW YORK, July 22.—Phil Cross outfought Marty Monroe in a one-sided 10-round encounter at the Longacre A. C. In the first round both swung wildly, Cross landing a left to the jaw that floored his opponent, when he stowed the Quiz to another knockdown when he rammed a left to the body and a right to the jaw. After that it was all Cross.

MORGAN'S SON AT TILLER OF WINNER

NEW YORK, July 22.—J. S. Morgan, a son of J. P. Morgan, Jr., added to the yachting glory of the Morgan family at Larchmont, when he steered the Quiz to victory in the Jewell class. J. P. Morgan, Jr., sailed to the starting line, but he sailed the Phoenix in the New York 30-footer class, but finished last.

The Anvers added a fourth to her consecutive string of victories. The Shiloh and Avenger had an exciting race, and although the former led most of the course, the won by only nine seconds.

COMISKEY GETS NEW PLAYERS FOR TEAM

WICHITA, Kan., July 22.—It was announced here today that Jack Bolland, scout for the St. Joseph Baseball Club, has sold Outfielder Tex Jones and Shortstop Roy Wachtan to the Chicago American League club for $4,000 in cash and four players. Jones and Wachtan will report to Manager Comiskey at once, and Bolland will remain with St. Joseph this season.

Before and After the Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

This Cobb person ought to be ashamed of himself. After all the cheers the Boston fans gave him, after all the complimentary notices our newspapers have showered upon him, after a particularly kind article printed about him in this column yesterday, he repaid everything by a puerile act in the last game. Made crazy, doubtless, by teh heating he knew the Red Sox were going his way, he started some dirty ball tactics and when everybody who tried to had simply made everybody who tried to had simply removed himself from the field.

The trouble started in the fifth inning. With one down, Cobb came to bat and faced a sharp grounder to Gardner. Now, knowing he had no time to waste with such a speedy man as Cobb, made a quick accurate throw to Stahl, nailing the runner by a good foot. Cobb slid into the bag, feet first, on the wrong side, colliding with Jake Stahl. Both men went down and both appeared to be hurt. Cobb rolled down into his stocking, and showed the marks of a spike. Stahl rubbed his ankle and then spat on his hands, signifying that he was ready to continue the game. The Red Sox pitcher and Eddie Karger, the Red Sox catcher, told Cobb he had no desire to slide to first in that way. Cobb came back with a caustic answer and in about five seconds there were offers and accepted challenges to fight. Karger is a Texan and was a pretty fair sailor as a bell player, but not what you would call a fighter. Tom knew what he was doing. Chief Clinic, game and so on.

Several Red Sox players joined in the closing match and for a time it looked like a free fight on the field. But the game went on. Just to show what a fine ball player Cobb is, he made a few plays notify all whom it might concern that Ferguson was out. Cobb deliberately laid down a bunt toward first and again raced full tilt for the bag. Unfortunately for his well-performed stunt, Karger fielded the ball perfectly and threw him out at first. Cobb sibling in and wriggling about as though seeking Stahl's flesh.

Cobb got the grand laugh from everybody. As the players left the field, Cobb was invited to visit the Red Sox dressing room. He promptly accepted and was walking in that direction when wiser heads prevailed and he was even away on his business.

The truth of the whole matter is, probably, that Cobb let his head become his team was being beaten. Maybe he will be good when the two teams meet again. May be he won't.

That loose run of Karger's really won the game in the second inning, but of course it was necessary to play out the full game as prescribed by baseball law. When the Tigers were in the box he was as cool as a cucumber, lying on like the Speaker and terrific which never lets go until it has the ball and he has won more than one game this year with his slap stick.

TIGERS PLAYING BETTER THAN IN 1909, BUT---

When the season of 1910 opened Hughey Jennings remarked that he had the best club this year that he headed since he came into the American League and that if the pitchers showed the proper class nothing could stop the Tigers from landing their fourth consecutive pennant.

But Jennings' one four five became a real state of affairs. The pitchers continue to be Jennings's one great weakness, and outside of Donovan, and occasionally Willett and Mullin, none of them are producing an article of ball worth while.

After finishing the first half of this season the Tigers were about ten points behind the Athletics in the standing. After they finished the first half of last season they were leading the Athletics by about twenty points. They were first in the standing at this time last year, while today they are trailing the first division.

But the Tigers gave the pitchers better defensive and defensive support during the first half of this season than they did during the same period last year. This season they batted about one point better than last and hit fifteen points better.

More than that the Tigers scored seventy-two more runs than they did last season, they got twenty-six more hits, stole seventeen more bases and advanced seven times more than in the first half of the last baseball year.

The improvement in offensive play as shown by these figures is wonderful. Last year the Tiger pitchers were going good, something which always proves an incentive for a team to play at its top speed. This year the pitchers have been doing poor work, giving their men behind them little or no encouragement and at most times discouraging them at everything.

If you have asked yourself "what's the matter with the Tigers?" study the figures and note the difference. After a careful survey the batting matter will not be much of a mystery to you.

TIGER WRIGHT MEETS COAST STAR IN TENNIS BATTLE

The tennis matches this afternoon at the Longwood Cricket Club promise everything in the line of good exhibitions, for Beals C. Wright, the Boston crack and M. E. McLaughlin of the coast, and intercollegiate champion plays Alfred S. Dabney in the other semi-final contest.

Few contests in the history of the Longwood's many tourneys have proved such a battle as they between Wright and Little, and Touchard and Gardner. It cannot be said that either pair was decidedly on, or off their game, nor was it due to flukes that the younger and less experienced pair won, but as to equality in stamina and knowledge of the strokes, Touchard and Gardner had a slight advantage.

Touchard has not played such brilliant tennis since the tournament opened and although the condition in the sure partner may have had something to do with it, it was an accepted fact that he has never before showed the sustained ability to play such scintillating tennis throughout the session of five sets or forty-four games.

E. R. Gardner of New York, formerly from Boston, proved the second surprise pair of the pair, his best shot being a cut cross court drive at the net. Time and again he would score a point for his side of the court by this stroke. His efforts in the back court were also remarkable, and were always a very little distance from the lines. Both Touchard and Wright-Little were put to the test, and it is safe to say that with either two a great battle is on the way. The match in the Eastern doubles championship is very straight for Touchard and Gardner. Touchard has another interesting match in view, namely, that with Wilfred Baker, the Harvard captain, who is one of the best of some interesting results in the national tennis year at Newport.

JOHNSON WILL HOLD TITLE MANY YEARS

By CHARLEY WHITE.

Jack Johnson is a great fighter—in fact one of the best we have ever had. He has the best defence of any man in the business. He is a hard hitter with either hand, especially with his left, which he hooks and shoots as straight as an arrow. He fought a very clean and fair fight with Jeff. Often at the end of a round he would tap the "old fellow" on the shoulder and "kid" him, showing his good feeling toward Jeff during the bout. He was in perfect condition, due to his evening training ever since he won the title from Tommy Burns.

The one thing which impressed me was his fighting attitude. He stands up straight—never crouches—thus gaining the advantage of height and reach. If he keeps in his present form he will be champion for many, many years. He is a marvel and don't forget this. If he was a white man the public would accord to him the title of the greatest heavyweight that ever donned a boxing glove.

As for Jeffries, he was not the same man who fought Fitz, Corbett, Ruhlin and Sharkey. When he fought these men he was full of fight and as lively as a youngling rubber ball, whereas in this fight he was listless and seemed dopy. He looked flat-footed—something Jeff was never known to do. He lacked his old fighting spirit—acted like a novice who was stepping into a ring for his first fight.

Up to the day of the contest he was in first-class condition. There is no doubt about this, as Billy Muldoon, the greatest expert in conditioning men, examined him and said he could be no better. Jeffries took his job too seriously, and this, combined with his long absence from the ring, upset his nervous system. Johnson outgeneraled Jeff all during the fight, especially in the clinches and breakaways, where he landed his most effective blows.

Jim should have gone and fought six fights before this big one. This would have done him a world of good. Jeff should come out and explain why he made such a poor showing. In the meantime Johnson must be given a deal of credit for his showing. As a championship fight, it was not up to the standard, and the fault cannot be laid at Johnson's feet.

Concerning Jeffries's gameness there is no doubt. He stood up and took the beatings that Fitz, Corbett and the rest of them gave him without quitting—why should he quit in this fight, where he did not receive one-half the punishment that he received in any of his other battles?

SIX RIDERS IN BIG BIKE RACE SATURDAY

The big six-cornered motor-paced race scheduled for the Revere Beach Oval tomorrow night is attracting much attention. Major Lemer Collins and George Wiley are the stars, Young and Frank Gafvin will have to be reckoned with.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

SONDERS READY FOR CUP RACE

Six of the eight sonder boats that will race for the Quincy challenge cup in the series of races in Hull Bay, beginning to-morrow, have been named. To-day is the last day when the challenging clubs can name their representatives. The Beverly and Sippican Clubs have yet to name their challengers.

The Quincy cup will be defended by the Boston Yacht Club, which has named the Elfen, owned by Charles P. Curtis. The Elfen has twice represented the Boston Yacht Club as a challenger, and last year won the famous Trophy. Besides winning the Quincy cup for the Boston Yacht Club, she was one of the American team against the Germans, and won the Governor Draper cup.

The Hingham Yacht Club will be represented by the Harpoon, owned by Charles Francis Adams, 2d. The Eastern Yacht Club by the Eel, owned by Herbert M. Sears; the Corinthian Yacht Club by the Sally XI, owned by Lawrence F. Percival; the Hingham Yacht Club by the Novice, owned by George W. Wightman, and the Manchester Yacht Club by the Anna, a new boat, owned by Guy Lowell.

A change has been made in the hour for starting to-morrow's races. Instead of 9:30 o'clock sharp, as originally announced, has decided to fire the first gun at 10:45 a. m. This will enable the crews of the racing boats to take the 9:20 steamer for Pemberton.

STRAIGHT TIPS
FOR SPORT FANS

OF ALL TH RUMDUM THINGS baseball in a tour with that one which Ty Cobb pulled off yesterday was the rankest ever. Ty can play ball all right but he can play some pretty dirty tricks also. I don't believe a fan in the crowd would have muttered a word of sympathy if he had turned his ankle that time he slid feet first toward the bag. And then when he tried to make Eddie Karger look like a big boob he again got his goat. If I had been one Mr. Karger I would not have been so temperate. Either Tyrus or I would be taken from the field, probably to a hospital. What makes me sore at myself is that I handed this fellow Cobb a little boost yesterday, and instead of being a "doofiful" boy, he comes back, and proves to be worse than the proverbial thankless child. Tyrus will up. You can sling the ball in a pretty flip way, but you're a rum-dum on your manners.

THOSE ST. LOUIS BROWNS ARE HERE to-day for the first of four games, and I'm going to be awfully disappointed unless the Sox take three out of the series. They should take all. As I am one of those who are yelling for the Boston bunch to cop the flag, I'm hoping that the Sox will not put it over New York in their series, and that the Athletics will be forced to bet up on that winning string of theirs. Then let the Highlanders come on—and take their medicine.

ABOUT THE BEST WAY TO HANDLE a refractory player is the way our old friend Mr. John Metzraw handles Bugs Raymond. Anytime that Bugs starts in to do the cut-up act, McGraw calls him in the last encounter McGraw nailed him so hard that Raymond is now wearing a darkened glimmer.

CHOYNSKI IN A LETTER WRITTEN to Jeffries, hands the Afalfa monarch a lot of advice, and a let'ed criticism. First as to the wise-stuff. "Back yourself for $50,000 for a return match," Joe urges Jim. If Jim takes a tip from me, he'll keep that fifty thousand salted away. It's better to have it than to turn it over to the Smoke. Now as to the criticism. Jeffries you were a coward in that fight," declares Choynski. Even that is charitable compared to what those who lost money on him think of the Big Fellow. Take it from me, the fighter is dead, as dead as a prehistoric aytilgics, whatever that is.

Straight Tips: Kindly decide the following bet. Was Young Joseph, who got to the Polo Grounds in time to see the play 1901, officially credited with a holiday. As I am a minor-leaguer outside of a holiday. As I am a great baseball fan and think I'm right, I will be very much pleased to be on the right side of the argument. Also being a baseball sport and also a constant reader of your sport tips, I remain. J. P. SULLIVAN.

Ware, Mass.

There were a few double-header dates scheduled that did not come on holidays.

Straight Tips: Settle a bet for a constant reader. A says Langford challenged Jack Johnson and Johnson chumped Langford to place $10,000, which Sam did. Now B says Langford played the $10,000, but demands that the $10,000 goes as a side bet at the prevailing odds. A says that the $10,000 goes as ring money. Who is right? J. O.

A wins so far as the challenge went. The money part is a little shady. Can't vouch for his being put up.

Straight Tips: I am a reader of your tips and notice that Jack Leach and Tom Clarke are to box. Tom Clarke is living in Roxbury, the Cambridge boxer, ever get a chance to see Jack Tom Sullivan and Young Dick Hollins fight and what were the results? M. S.

Hollins.

Charlie O'Rourke and Jack Twin fought five fifteen, fighting three draws, two of fifteen rounds and one eight rounds, while O'Rourke knocked out Jack in fifteen rounds and Jack beat him in fifteen rounds in the last battle.

Straight Tips: To decide an argument will you kindly answer these questions. Is Sam Johnson a full-blooded negro? Is his wife a full-blooded white woman, or are they both of mixed blood. G. A. T.

Norwood.

Johnson is a full-blooded negro, but his wife is not.

Straight Tips: In order to settle an argument please state in your valuable columns the full name of Tommy Burns' manager, who battle John L. Sullivan fought?

EDDIE PARADISE.

Burns fought name is Noah Brusso. John L. fought just a few times. About 150 times would cover his limit in the ring.

Straight Tips: A bets his team would make more runs than B's team. A's team played and made three runs and B's team played the same and did not make a run. The game was called on account of rain. Is the bet off? B. P.

It can't be a bet when one team didn't play. Unless a man has a chance it bet can't stand.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

Elmer Flick, who was recently signed by the Cleveland team, is a man who is determined to have no Shinoff on of the big leagues. Flick was a great catcher and despite the warnings of his manager and fellow players he would not incase himself in pads every game. KID SEAGER LOSES TO TERRY M'GRAW

BALTIMORE, July 22.—After fifteen rounds of the hardest kind of fighting Terry McGraw was given the decision over Kid Seager before the Eureka Athletic Club. The worst that Seager could have gotten was a draw. While McGraw was the stronger of the two and had more than the better of in the fighting, yet Seager was by far the cleverer and outboxed his opponent at every stage of the game.

McGraw's best work was done in the clinches, while Seager kept using a left jab to the nose and mouth. Both men were fighting fast at the finish. In the semi-windup Kid Waltman of this city, with a series of blows to the stomach, put Jack McCue of Toledo into dreamland in the fourth round.

PACKY PROVES IT BY "SHERLOCK HOLMES"

NEW YORK, July 22.—Packy McFarland, the "stock yards champion," returned to this country from England on board the Adriatic. Packy fought Freddie Welsh at the National Sporting Club of London on May 30 for a purse of $6,000 and a side bet of $4,000, the referee calling the battle a draw.

"My ree I won a fight in my life," said Packy today. "I won with Welsh. I had him at every angle and every one in the house thought I was going to get the decision.

"I have a letter from Sir A. Conan Doyle, the famous English author and lover of fair play, in which he commends my fight and says he thinks I was entitled to the decision."

NEW HORSES IN INTERCLUB MEET

The battle between the Fellway, Lynn, Dorchester, Metropolitan and Quannapawitt Driving Clubs will be on again at Combination Park, Saturday afternoon.

The racing at the two previous matinees has been fast-class and the rivalry between the members of the five clubs is growing warmer with every matinee.

All of the clubs are making every effort to get the strongest string of horses possible. Since the last several new ones have been added to the roster of the different clubs. The Metropolitan Club has strengthened its lines by the addition of the fast trotters, Chase, 2:07¼, and Monroe, 2:19½, while a syndicate of members of the Fellway Club have the speedy pacer Young Chimo, 2:10¼, with the belief that he will be able to take the measure of the Lynn flyer. Dedham that proved five points for the shoemakers at both of the previous matinees.

There has also been a shifting about of the horses in the other classes by the board of strategy of the different clubs.

The clubs are now well bunched in the matter of points won and there should be great sport when the horses clash again. The entries:

CLASS A, TROTTING—Capt. Higginson, Jr., Hollis John, L.; Hanlon, L.; Chase, D.; Dearborn, M.

CLASS B, PACING—Bille C., Jr.; Kremelis, D.; Oxford, F.; Foster, W. H.; Billy Beauty, L.

CLASS C, TROTTING—Rose Mack, L.; Kloo, Jr.; Billie, L.; Monroe, M.; Decatur, G.

CLASS D, PACING—Bellancy, L.; Cascader, G.; Young Chimo, F.; Wadmon, C.; Mr. Ginger, L.

KERSCHER SMASHES TWO WORLD'S MARKS

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., July 22.—Ben Kerscher of New York made two miles on a half-mile track at Shattuck Park in 3:24, which is said to be a record. Barney Oldfield clipped a quarter second from his best previous time of 1m.01⅘s. for a mile on a half-mile track.

PERRY SHADES YOUNG JOHNSON

George Perry had a shade on Young Jack Johnson in the main bout at the American A. C., although no decision was given. Jack put up a great fight, but did not live up to his name.

The bout was a hard, rugged affair, with Perry showing a great uphill fight. In the early rounds Johnson had all the better of the going, but Perry found his stride as the bout progressed, and in the seventh floored the negro. A record-breaking attendance thoroughly enjoyed the show.

In the opening bout of six rounds Young Johnson shaded Jonnie Fitzgerald. Young Jasper, with a ten-pound weight advantage, outclassed Young Semmon. Chester Wallcott met Al Rudolph of New York. That's the best that can be said. It was the only poor bout of the night.

DALMATIAN WINS.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Dalmatian, the 1 to 2 favorite, easily won the Yonkers handicap, and in doing so set a new track record for a mile and one-sixteenth. He stepped the distance in 1:45 1-5, which is a fifth of a second faster than the best previous time.

Preventing Undesirable Attachments of the Young

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner.

THERE is a certain mother, a widow, whose earthly treasure is a beautiful young daughter of sixteen.

This young daughter just at high school is a boy of twenty-one, wholesome, kindly natured, well-mannered lad of good lineage.

When Graduation Day came, the lad returned to his home in a distant State, where he was to fit himself for college. Before leaving, he frankly confessed to the mother of the young girl that he was desperately in love with her daughter and desired to become engaged to her; that he wanted the privilege of writing to her as his promised wife.

The mother had seen the growing affection between the two young people, but had not regarded it seriously until the youth spoke from the fulness of his heart.

Now what did this mother do? Did she ridicule this youthful affection, but she would her young daughter? Did she tell the lovers that they were too young to think of such a thing; that they must be separated and not communicate with each other?

Being a sensible mother, she did nothing of the kind. She smiled upon the young man and said: "You are very young to think seriously of love or marriage; you seem to be a nice lad. So far as I can judge of you, at this early stage of your development, I think you would be a good man and would make a good husband.

"So I'll Let You Write"

"If now my little daughter is very fond of you, I know that you will both be very unhappy if I forbid your correspondence, so I am going to let you write to my daughter and let her answer you. You may think of each other as engaged and write to each other with that understanding.

"But, of course, I being older, realize how many are the obstacles which Time will intervene between your dream and its culmination.

"In all probability this young affection will not end in marriage. Whatever occurs to prevent it will be for the best—if it is prevented—and the pain which may result to one or both would be for your best development.

"If both do remain fond and faithful until you are in a position to marry, then it will, indeed, be one of those rare first loves which stands the test of Time.

"So now you may go, happy for the present, and I earnestly hope that the happiness will be permanent."

The relatives and friends of the mother are almost, without exception, opposed to the position she has taken. They think it ridiculous that she should permit her young daughter to be engaged, and to think seriously of any young man as a lover at this early period.

What More Beautiful?

Meanwhile, the mother has the complete and absolute confidence of her daughter. Every letter the girl writes, every letter the girl receives is shown to the mother. All her thoughts, dreams, ambitions, fears, she tells this mother. They are bound together by golden ties of love and confidence.

What could be more beautiful than this understanding between the two. What would the mother have gained by taking the austere attitude which her friends say would have been more sensible, but which would have resulted in making the girl unhappy, and dragging her surreptitiously into a clandestine correspondence with her lover?

Of course, if the youth had been less desirable it would have been necessary to meet the situation in a different manner.

Had he been immoral and unprincipled it would have required the greatest tact and tenderness on the part of the mother to try and shatter the ideal which had been formed in her young daughter's mind.

But a mother like the one described above would not have permitted her child to grow into an affection for a pronouncedly undesirable youth. She would have realized the necessity for prevention before called upon to use a cure.

It is always safe for parents to create mental pictures in the minds of their young daughters regarding the desirable qualities of a young man. To praise truthfulness, to praise honesty, to praise healthful ambition, to praise promptness and reliability in the small matters of life, and to speak with pity of those unfortunate youths who do not possess such qualities.

Parents Can Mould Character

The young girl who is reared with the idea that debt is a disgrace, that it is an evidence of bad breeding to be a borrower, will not be easily led into a love affair by a young man who has the reputation of being in debt and of borrowing from his friends.

It is a much easier matter to prevent a young daughter from forming an undesirable attachment than to prevent a son; but the character of both can be moulded and shaped according to the desires of the parent who is willing to give the time, thought and interest to the matter which its importance demands.

Parents, who are mourning over the messalliance of their children are usually those who have relied upon the good sense of their offspring, or upon their own stern precepts, bestowed in the way of sermons or scoldings, to guide their conduct.

They have not kept in close touch with the thoughts and feelings of their sons and daughters; they have not identified themselves with their inmost lives.

The average father knows virtually nothing of the heart and mind of his child, after it reaches a thinking and semi-reasoning age. This is equally true of his son and his daughter, and it is equally true of the mother as well as the father.

To be a good father and mother is the most difficult and exacting duty in life.

The Task of the True Parent

Therefore it is one in which are to be found the fewest successes. Thousands of parents are ready to sacrifice money and comfort for the education of their children, and for the advancement of their worldly interests; but very few are to be found who are ready to give constant thought, time and attention to the study of their children's characters, and to the guidance of their young minds from the cradle to the college.

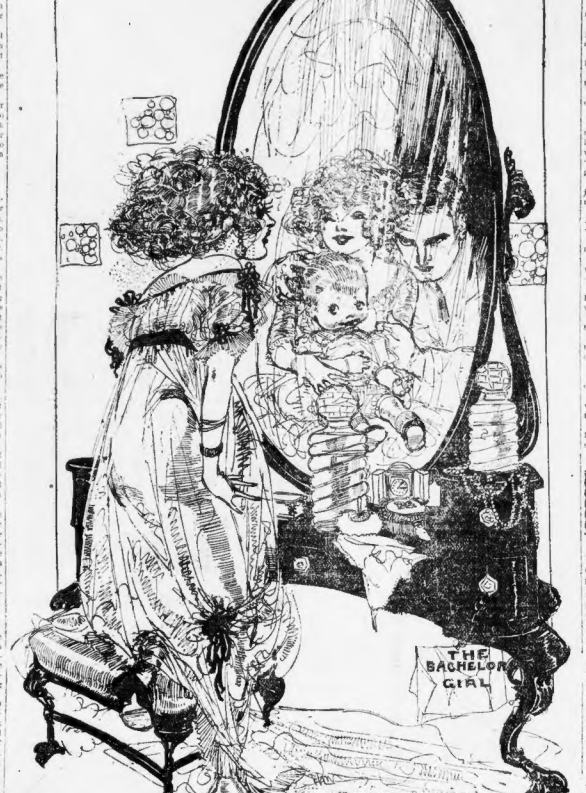
But in this less expensive and more difficult method alone lies good parentage.

How about the girl who has many men friends but no husband?

The girl with many men friends is distinctly a modern product. Read about her problems in next Sunday's Boston American.

"Seein' Things"---By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner.



It doesn't have to be Hallowe'en time for the Bachelor Girl to see things over her shoulder in the mirror. Any old time she can lean her face close when there's nobody lookin' and see a certain heart-stirring picture looking back at her from the deep pool of the glass.

Inconsistency of Women From a Man's Viewpoint

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"WHAT are you writing now?" asked a man, who had dropped in for a brief call and found me laboring over the typewriter.

"Oh, I've almost exhausted every subject I can think of. I'm now working on a series—The Inconsistency of Women."

"Well," cynically, "you can never exhaust that."

"If I do," indignantly, "I can take up the Inconsistency of Men."

"And you'll find that men are jewels of consistency compared with women."

"Yes," I murmured, in polite disbelief.

"Consistency? Why a woman hasn't the slightest conception of what consistency is! She doesn't know the meaning of the word. A consistent woman?" He laughed. "She would be starred in a museum, A greater rarity isn't known."

"Your seem very emphatic on the subject." I ventured, scenting some much needed "copy."

"I have reason to be," curtly.

Luring Him On

"Some personal experience? Trying not to show too much interest.

"Well, you don't usually get very much worked up over other people's experience—do you?"

I admitted that. Then came a pause. Plainly, he was not going on unless he was artfully led.

I thought for several moments. And then came an inspiration.

"But perhaps you didn't look at it right? She might not have been so inconsistent as you thought?"

This was effective.

"Not inconsistent?" bitterly. "Not inconsistent?" He laughed harshly.

I waited. But no further information was offered. He was staring moodily out the window. I was growing impatient.

"Still you might have been mistaken," I hinted. "A man doesn't always understand."

"Mistaken?" more bitterly. "Oh, there wasn't any chance to be mistaken. She made it plain enough."

"Well, of course, I'm in no position to Judge. If I knew the facts——" I suggested hopefully.

"Well, what do you think of a girl who——"

He paused.

"Yes?" eagerly.

"Looking for Copy?"

"Oh, what's the use! There's only one thing you could think—that she was about as inconsistent and unreasonable as a woman can be—and that's the limit."

"I might not think anything of the kind?" almost at the end of my patience. "I don't know anything about it. Now if I knew the FACTS——"

"Well, it began in this way——"

"Yes, yes?" with tense eagerness.

"Oh, but it won't help to talk about it. The more I think of it the more sore I get. I've got to cut it out—forget it."

"Oh," throwing discretion to the winds. "I think you're the most tantalizing person! Here you've started a half dozen times to tell me the facts—and each time——"

"Oh," with sudden illumination. "You're looking for copy? Is that why you're so keen about it?"

"Inconsiderate Man"

"Why, no—of course not," indignantly. "How could you think that?"

He smiled, unbelievingly. "Next time be more diplomatic, don't be so eager—it's rather suspicious.

"Well, it took you some time——" I laughed defiantly.

"Yes, I was pretty dense."

"And I've wasted half an hour—and am left with an unsatisfied curiosity and no copy?"

"Serves you right for trying to capitalize the troubles of your friends."

"Well, if I didn't get any enlightenment on the Inconsistent Woman, I got a good deal on the Inconsiderate Man—though one can always get that!"

A Wife's Misery

By WINIFRED BLACK

I have just received a letter from a woman who says she is so miserable she does not care to live any longer. Her husband, she declares, goes out night after night and leaves her alone at home. If she goes out with friends, or even with her own brother and sister, the husband flies into a fury and then sulks for days.

"I have a boy of nine and a girl ten, and my husband makes the greatest distinction between them," says the letter. "He is all for the boy, of course, I love both, but he is spoiling the boy until I can scarcely do anything with him. I was a strong, robust girl when I was married eleven years ago today. Now I am broken in health and like an old woman. My husband is well-to-do, but he gives me my household expense money twenty-five cents at a time, and quarrels over every nickel I spend. What shall I do?

Dear one, I feel as if some one had written me that she was married to a grizzly bear or a jungle tiger, and wanted to know what on earth to do. Of course I can't tell you, my dear correspondent, what you ought to do. You are the only person who can judge as to that.

I'm afraid I know what I would do. Not perhaps what I ought to, but what I would. I would take my little girl and get a legal separation. Husband won't get much satisfaction out of complaining to the Judge when he has to pay out the money for the support of yourself and child every month or go to jail.

The boy? You let husband have the full responsibility of that boy for a few months and he'll be back begging you to come home and keep him straight, and do it in your own way, before the boy has a chance to be completely spoiled.

As to the brother and sister and the other friends, I certainly should go out with them whenever I felt so disposed. If they are decent, respectable people and lead you into no folly, husband can get as cross as he likes, and take it out in temper. I would not let it ruffle me for one moment. A man such as you describe is a coward. A selfish animal that needs some one to discipline him. If you can't do it, why, go away for awhile, and let him see how much other people will stand from him. You are a free woman. Free in the noble, honest sense. No one can shackle your soul or put chains upon your mind.

Rise above all this petty persecution, live your own honest, honorable life in your own honest, honorable way. Husband will soon begin to wonder how on earth he ever terrified you so for so many years.

"Didn't Thinks." Are You One?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE "didn't thinks" are very large community—in fact, they are all the members of every family but the mother.

If mother should join this band, the whole family would sit down and gaze blankly at one another and exclaim: "Well, the idea! Mother didn't think. Did you ever hear of anything so preposterous."

Mother has to accept "didn't think" as an excuse for everything.

Father forgets some important commission, and his "Very sorry, my dear, but I forgot it entirely," is accepted by mother as ample excuse.

Sister forgets to attend to the duties that have been left to her, and her "Oh, mother, I'm so sorry, but, really, I forgot all about it," is accepted with patient forbearance.

Big brother forgets the important letter given him to mail, and little brother forgets it is supper time, and comes in after every one has finished.

Cheerfully, confidently and carelessly they proffer the time-worn excuse, and that ends it.

They all forget, and they all take advantage of the ever-ready forgiveness.

But suppose mother began to forget—what consternation and havoc would reign in the didn't think family?

How would father look, when, in answer to his "My dear, I haven't a shirt with a decent buttonhole or a sock without a hole," mother would carelessly answer, "Oh, two, dear; I quite intended mending them, but I forgot all about them?"

Can you see father's astonished and indignant face?

And when sister said, "Mother, is my dress ready for the party to-night?" and mother answered, "Dear, I'm so sorry, but I got interested in a book and forgot all about your dress," would sister answer sweetly, "That's all right, dear; but try and not forget another time."

What sister would probably do would be to sit down and sulk, or cry, and make life miserable for the entire household.

And imagine the entire "didn't think" household, if they came home and found that mother had forgotten to cook the dinner! Would they take the "forgetting" in grieved and patient silence? Not they.

Why is it that just because a woman has married a man and brought children into the world she is supposed to be a martyr, and enjoy it?

The complacent attitude of the average family is that "mother loves to sacrifice herself for us, and we let her do it—oh, yes, we are very selfish about it—we sweetly and confidently let her do it."

True to their name, the "didn't thinks" don't realize how large the burden is that rests on those patient mother shoulders.

They love her, but they forget how much she does for them, every day of their lives.

If she had time to go away on a week's visit, now and then, they would realize it, but they would forget again before she had been back a day, and, as a treat, allow her to do more for them than ever.

As long as the world lasts, mothers will sacrifice themselves and be happy in so doing, but that is no excuse for lack of appreciation from those for whom they make the sacrifice.

You, who read these words, probably belong to the "didn't think" family.

If so, try and pull yourself together and think, for a change.

Think of your mother and all she does, and has done for you, and begin to pay off some of your debts.

Dreams

By CECIL ALEXANDER.

BEYOND, beyond the mountain line,
The grey-stone and the boulder,
Beyond the growth of dark green pine,
That crowns its western shoulder,
There lies that fairy land of mine,
Unseen of a beholder.

Its fruits are all like rubies rare;
Its streams are clear as glasses;
There golden castles hang in air,
And purple grapes in masses,
And noble knights and ladies fair
Come riding down the passes.

Ah, me! they say, If I could stand
Upon these mountain ledges,
I should but see on either hand
Plain fields and dusty hedges;
And yet I know my fairy land
Lies somewhere o'er their edges.

Freckles

"Once Freckled Always Freckled" No Longer True—How to Remove Quickly.

Miss E. M. Berger of Beloit, Wis., along with thousands of others, believed it impossible to remove freckles, and that she'd always have them. She knows better now. She heard of Kintho, got a two-ounce package and tells her experience in the following letter: "I was always of the opinion that freckles could NOT be removed, but I thought I would give Kintho a trial, and it has truly convinced me that freckles CAN be removed. It has proved all you claim for it." Get a two-ounce package of Kintho (Ki-in-t-h-o) at Houghton & Dutton Co., Jordan Marsh Co., or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., and see how quickly it will banish your freckles.

Cupid Can Come Back

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

No more shall learned referee hear madam's painful story
And promptly hand her a decree that's interlocutory.
No more shall husbands shun a dun for alimony due,
Thus looking out for Number One as well as Number Two.
Divorce no longer shall abound from Butte to Hackensack,
For now a learned judge has found that Cupid can come back!

When quarreling couples come to him reciting tales of hate,
He tells them with a chuckle grim that they may separate,
"But, then," he adds, "you'll not be free for good and all, of course,
The ruling that you get from me is just a trial divorce!"
And so they go their different roads, each with a joyful smile
And, hearing separate single loads, are happy—for a while.

But soon the woes of spinsterhood begin to gall the wife
She finds it's nothing to the good—this lonely single life.
There's no one 'round the house to blame, when anything goes wrong;
They all forget, and they all take advantage of the ever-ready forgiveness.

But suppose mother began to forget—what consternation and havoc would reign in the didn't think family?

How would father look, when, in answer to his "My dear, I haven't a shirt with a decent buttonhole or a sock without a hole," mother would carelessly answer, "Oh, two, dear; I quite intended mending them, but I forgot all about them?"

You, who read these words, probably belong to the "didn't think" family.

If so, try and pull yourself together and think, for a change.

Think of your mother and all she does, and has done for you, and begin to pay off some of your debts.

Existence suddenly grows tame, and desolate and long,
And now that he's no longer there she sits and weeps, because,
Although, of course, she doesn't care, she wishes that he was!

And as for him, he's glad he's free—but then if he fell ill
Who'd ease his pain with catnip tea, or pass the quinine pill?
Who'd smooth his brow and stroke his hair, and, sobbing, whisper that She'd meant to throw that rocking chair, that bit him, at the cat!
With bitterness o'erflows his cup—his heart is sick and sore,
He wishes those six months were up, and she was home once more!

And so divorce has run its course, and Cupid, with his bow,
Throws out his chest and struts his best and cries, "I told you so,
I'm just my prime, and many a time when I have lost a bout
My friends have said 'The kid is dead, all in, and down and out.'
But now I know it is not so, I'm game for every fight;
Just lemme be and you will see that I'll come back all right!"

FALL WEDDING PLANS TOPICS AT RESORTS

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Plans for Autumn weddings are already under way and they, with the numerous budding romances at the various resorts, are furnishing about all the excitement there is these days.

Announcement has been made that the marriage of Miss Rosalind Fish, second daughter of Hamilton Fish of New York and John W. Cutler, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Cutler of Brookline is to take place October 8 at the Fish Summer home, Rockhaven, Garrison-on-the-Hudson, a spacious mansion with extensive grounds. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, who is the favorite aunt of the prospective bride and who is giving many entertainments in honor of the young couple, is to give the wedding reception.

Mr. Cutler was one of the leading sporting men of his class, Harvard '08, while Elliott Cutler, who is to be his brother's best man, graduated this same year. Another brother was in the varsity crew at New London. Miss Jane Fish will be her sister's maid of honor.

Miss Leonora Cobb, who is to marry Russell Amory, in September, is another interesting figure among the coming brides. Miss Cobb is at present with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Cobb, at their Summer home, Rockdale Farm, Brookline. Mr. Amory was to have therefore spent their Summers at Bar Harbor are spending this season at Nahant.

Robert Amory, Jr., is a Harvard '06 man and a member of the Union Club. His prospective mother-in-law, who, it is understood, is to be his best man, is Mrs. Mary Copley Amory and Miss Katherine Amory, Mr. Amory's sisters, will be among the bride's attendants. Miss Katherine Amory was a debutante of last Winter and her sister was presented a few seasons before.

September 15 is the date set for Miss Edith Deacon's wedding to George Lee Perkins, the ceremony to take place at Bar Harbor, the beautiful Newport residence of Mrs. Charles H. Baldwin, the prospective bride's grandmother. Miss Deacon has already received a large gift from her relative, Mrs. H. H. Brooks, a check, which she is to use for the purchase of an elaborate trousseau. Miss Deacon, who is at present the guest of friends in Boston, will go down to Newport next Saturday to visit Miss Sadie Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones.

The Dudley Pickmans, who spent the early season at their country place in the Norfolk Hunt region, are now at their Summer cottage at Beverly Cove.

Miss Blanche Stimpson of Ivy street, Brookline, is at Northeast Harbor, Me., where she is to spend the entire season.

William A. Bierbaum and his family are at Beverly Farms, where they are occupying the L. Cartaret Penno cottage for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Livingston Grandin of Commonwealth avenue have arrived at Bailey's Harbor, where they usually spend their Summers.

Mrs. A. Forbes Cunnat and her sister, Miss MacNaught, are the guests at Cotuit Inn, which will include Bar Harbor and Mt. Desert, on their list, and also to take a trip up the St. Lawrence.

Mrs. Stephen Reynolds of Appleton avenue, Brookline, and the Misses Reynolds, are at their Summer home in Northeast Harbor, Me., where Mr. Reynolds joins them for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Boardman of Washington are at their cottage, Wonalancet, at Northeast Harbor, where they are actively participating in the smart events of the Summer colonists there.

Mr. de Thal of the Russian embassy is spending the Summer at the Essex County club, Manchester. Baron Rosen, the Russian ambassador, who is occupying the cottage of Mrs. Russell Sturgis at Santa's Point, Manchester, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey S. Richardson of Ellis, Slate road and their daughter, Miss Ethel Richardson, are at Northeast Harbor for the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley L. Pickman of Beacon street, who have been spending the early Summer at their country estate in Hood, are at their North Shore home at Beverly Cove, for the Summer.

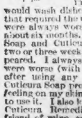
The Greeley family is well scattered this Summer. Mrs. Horace P. Gray and her daughters, Miss Marian Greeley, of the Hotel Meredith, are occupying the handsome cottage at Manchester for the season; Norman Greeley, who has a cottage at Beverly, is spending the season at Poland Spring, Me., and Russell Greeley is in Paris for the Summer.

Mrs. Charles Waldron is spending her second season at her cottage at Jamesburg. She still has as her guest for part of the Summer, Miss Colette Dumaresq, the fiancee of her son, Charles Hamilton Whitney.

BREAKING OUT ALL OVER BODY

Itched Dreadfully, When Scratched It would Bleed and Become Very Sore, Could Scarcely Sleep as the Itching was Worse at Night. Dreaded Putting Hands in Water.

Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment 3 Weeks. Trouble all Disappeared.



"Some time ago I had a breaking out all over my body. It first started like that was red spots and itched and itched dreadfully. When I scratched it, it would bleed and become very sore. I tried almost everything for the itching but none gave me much relief. I could scarcely sleep as the itching was always worse at night. My hands were so sore I dreaded putting them in water and after I would wash dishes or do laundry work that required the use of cold water they were always worse. This went on for about six months. I then got Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and in two or three weeks the trouble all disappeared. I always found that my hands were worse (with a dry scale on them) after using any cheap soap but the Cuticura Soap produced such a soothing feeling on my skin that it was a pleasure to use it. I also know what wonderful Cuticura Remedies have done for a friend of mine, so I would recommend them to any one. Mrs. Delaware Barrett, 611 King St., Wilmington, Del., Nov. 15, 1909."

CHAPTER XVII.

A Gay Night in Paris

Mr. JAMES B. COULSON was about as much at home in the Grand Hotel, Paris, as he had been at the Savoy in London. His headquarters were at the American Bar, where he approved of the cocktails, entronized the celebrities, and continually met fellow-countrymen with whom he possessed and visited various places of amusement. His business during the daytime he kept to himself, but he certainly was possessed of a myriad of documents and drawings scattered to sundry parties connected with the manufacture of wooden goods, the prices of which he was always ready to sing in a most enthusiastic fashion.

Mr. Coulson was not a man whose acquaintance it was difficult to make, and few to seven every afternoon, seeming the attractions of the hotel rather than the generally fresh air which permeated the outer boulevards, sat at the receipt of the latest upon an article of furniture which he confided was nothing more nor less than wood, dividing his attention between desultory conversation with any acquaintance who might happen to be in a drift, and watching the lobbyists to which some of his companions were addicted. Nothing of this sort, however, was to be seen on the night of March 22nd.

Coulson was sitting in a deep chair, filling a fine cigar, and looking through the window at the people who were passing to and fro on the Boulevard des Capucines, when he was accosted by a friend, who, after a few words of greeting, sank into the chair next to him and ordered a drink.

"Well, Coulson," he said, "I suppose you've been over here from London either to pump me or to pry me. You are either a detective or a political spy or a secret service agent of some sort, or you don't go on any of your own. Now, put it in a business form; what can I do for you? Make an offer, and let's see where we are."

Mr. Gaynsforth began to recover himself. It did not follow, because he had made a mistake, that he was to lose the game.

"I am neither a detective, Mr. Coulson," he said, "nor a secret service agent—in fact, I am nothing definite at all. I have a friend, however, who for certain reasons does not care to appear over himself, but who is nevertheless very much interested in a particular event—or, rather, incident—which you are concerned in."

"Good!" Mr. Coulson declared. "Get right on."

"That friend," Mr. Gaynsforth continued calmly, "is prepared to pay a thousand pounds for the privilege of making an offer to the nature of those papers which were in the office of Mr. Hamilton Fane on the night of March 22nd."

"Good thousand pounds!" Mr. Coulson repeated. "Go while."

"That friend," the Englishman continued, "prepared to pay another thousand for the privilege of an introduction to the partner of Mr. Richard Vandergole on the following day."

"Say, your friend's got the stuff!" Mr. Coulson remarked admiringly.

"My friend is not a poor man," Mr. Gaynsforth admitted. "You see, there is a sort of feeling abroad that there two things are connected. I am not working on behalf of the police. I am not working on behalf of any one who desires the most publicity. But I am working for some one who desires to have his name treated to any spree when you've got a piece of business that to you after."

"I came over here," Mr. Gaynsforth replied, carelessly, "on the matter I have mentioned to you."

"Well, over here to Paris?" Mr. Coulson exclaimed.

"And only to Paris," the other replied dryly, "but to discover one Mr. James B. Coulson, whose health I now have the pleasure of drinking."

"Well, this beats me!" he exclaimed. "How any one in their senses could believe that there was any connection between me and Hamilton Fane or that office scrap beats me. I can't imagine."

"You know Hamilton Fane," Mr. Gaynsforth remarked. "Find out something for the inquest. You appeared to have known him pretty well. I can't understand—"

"Say, you're Hamilton Fane," Mr. Coulson interrupted, with an air of not having heard the interruption. "You have the money. We want the information. You can give me Hamilton Fane's address—I suppose you're the chief of his department."

"Certainly," Mr. Gaynsforth answered. "However, that's neither here nor there. Everything else is a matter of indifference, as you were concerned, of course. This is a business matter with me, and if the two thousand pounds don't sound attractive enough, I dare say the amount must be revised, that's all. But I want you to understand this, Mr. Coulson, I represent a man of a syndicate, or call it what you will."

"Call it a government," Mr. Coulson muttered under his breath.

"Well, it want you will," Mr. Gaynsforth continued, with an air of not having heard the interruption. "We have the money and we want the information. You can give it us. Here it is, then. I haven't—I'm not much. We don't even ask for the name of the man who committed those crimes. All we do want to know the nature of those papers which were in the possession of Hamilton Fane's occupied in the Stamp and Excise Office department of Somerset House. Finally, what the mischief you are doing over here in Paris."

"Have you ordered the supper?" Mr. Coulson barked suddenly.

"I have ordered everything you suggested," Mr. Gaynsforth answered, "even oysters a chicken en casserole, lettuce salad, and some fruit and cheese and coffee, memory."

"It is understood that you are my host?" Mr. Coulson insisted.

"Certainly," his companion declared "I consider it an honor."

Mr. Coulson sold, winking out his empty glass to the sommelier, "you may consider it a privilege, and one that I don't mind. Mr. James B. Coulson, traveling in patents and gas fittings, gentleman. If you put a couple of millions down upon the table I am with you. Mr. James B. Coulson, traveling in wooden patents, gentleman. Now, if you add a million to that, and pile on the agony, I'm with you, and believe it. There's no reason why you should and I shouldn't have a pleasant evening."

Mr. Gaynsforth, although he was an Englishman and young, showed himself to be possessed of a sense of humor. He leaned back in his seat and roared with laughter.

"Mr. Coulson," he said, "I congratulate you and your employers. Let us now proceed to business with business! Help yourself to the oysters and pass the wine."

(To be Continued To-morrow.)

MRS. ASTOR TO WED DUNRAVEN, NEWPORT HEARS

NEWPORT R. I., July 22.—The engagement of Mrs. Ava Astor and the Earl of Dunraven is soon to be announced, according to letters received from London by friends of Mrs. Astor. Mrs. Astor is expected here next month. Society is greatly interested, as Lord Dunraven is one of the best known sportsmen in England and popular among the London clubs. He is thirty-five years old and wealthy.

Newport, it is said, has not only accepted the report, which got out through the gossip channel, but looks upon the match with favor and approves of it in every particular.

Lord Dunraven is a son of the famous yachtsman who figured in several international races in his efforts to lift the America's cup. Like his father, Lord Dunraven is fond of the water and is quite a yachtsman himself.

Lord Dunraven visited this country in 1895 with his father and was a guest at Newport and was having entertained.

The name of the Earl of Dunraven has been mentioned with that of Mrs. Astor lately. Now Newport is expecting formal announcement of the engagement at any time.

NEWPORT BELLE RETURNS HOME AS FOREIGNER

When Miss May Van Alen, daughter of James J. Van Alen of Newport, arrived on the White Star liner Zeeland at Boston, she surprised the customs inspectors and her fellow passengers by declaring that she is now a resident of a foreign country and is here only as a visitor. In consequence of this declaration she was permitted to bring in a considerable quantity of luggage without paying duty on it.

There were fully a dozen trunks in the lot, and they were filled with gowns of Paris make. An American woman returning from Europe with the same quantity of finer would be obliged to hand over a considerable amount of cash in payment of duty on it, but Miss Van Alen's simple declaration did away with that necessity.

It is four years since Miss Van Alen went abroad last, and she says that she has since been living in Paris. She was met at the pier by her father, and with him went on board to his villa at Newport.

It is Miss Van Alen's intention to remain at Newport only until the end of the Summer social season. Then she will go back to Paris.

Miss Van Alen did not leave the pier until the last of her baggage, or she paid a small amount upon some articles purchased abroad, as did her father and friends, and which she declared as such.

RAILROAD HEAD WHOSE DEATH IS DEEP MYSTERY

I. G. RAWN

RAWN'S DEATH CAME ON EVE OF BIG SCANDAL

CHICAGO, July 22.—Whether Ira G. Rawn, president of the Monon road, was killed by a burglar in his home at Winnetka Wednesday morning, or whether, as is stated by Chicago police, he committed suicide, railroad men assert his death occurred on the evening of the exposure of what may be one of the greatest scandals in railroad history.

Questions asked Rawn at a hearing July 7 in the Illinois Central car repair cases, it were planned, it is said, by the attorneys close to the president to incriminate Rawn as responsible for conditions in the road.

Rawn, it is asserted, knew of the purchase of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and would make it his duty to delay the progress of the examination. Twice on personal cause that he obtained a postponement, but he died before the case had failed and the examination was to have been continued next Monday.

"His death will not cause any halt in the inquiry," said Walter Fisher, one of the attorneys in charge of the inquiry. "It is impossible for us to estimate the amount of money involved."

CRACKER MEN AT BASS POINT FOR AN OUTING

Three hundred cracker and biscuit manufacturers, their wives, sisters, sweethearts and friends quit fighting the "cracker trust" today and enjoyed an outing at Bass Point, under the auspices of the independent Biscuit and Cracker Manufacturers' Association of the United States. Manufacturers from all over the country were present and there was something doing every moment of the day.

The members of the party left Rowe's wharf on the steamer South Shore at 9:30 a. m. and sailed to Boston Light, Harding's Ledge, Egg Rock and many interesting points, finally mooring at Bass Point for dinner. Dancing, singing and other amusing events were on for the trip down.

A good old New England clam and fish dinner was served at Fuller's, which was followed by the opening of the afternoon programme. There were fast ball games between the Rough Riders and Biscuits and Beaters and the Colonels and the Yankees. Mass of the biscuit and cracker men's experts half-baked showed up well on both diamonds.

There were also a number of athletic events, including fat men's races, half-mile runs, 100-yard dashes and throwing the hammer. The women who were not watching their husbands' ball contests played ball visited the dance hall and theatre nearby.

The return trip was scheduled for 6 p. m. Before starting the Boston tug boat sailed for Marblehead and a number of other points nearby.

President Charles R. Boyce was one of the busy men of the day. The committee in charge of today's programme was composed of George M. Washburn, Willard C. Poole, E. S. Foote, Augustus Hubbard and O. B. Gilman.

BOSTON DENTIST ELECTED OFFICER

DENVER, July 22.—The National Dental Association selected Cleveland as the next meeting place and elected officers as follows:

President, E. S. Gaylord, New Haven, Ct.; vice-president for the East, Charles S. Butler, Buffalo; vice-president for the West, E. H. Warner, Denver; vice-president for the South, John W. Dayid, Corsicana, Texas; corresponding secretary, Charles W. Rogers, Boston; recording secretary, Dr. H. C. Brown, Columbus, O.; treasurer, Dr. A. R. Melendy, Knoxville, Tenn.

FATALLY HURT BY AUTO, RUNS HOME

Picking herself up after the automobile of Dr. M. Josephine Beede of No. 10 Conway street, Roslindale, had passed over her body, five-year-old Katherine Harlington of No. 845 Hyde Park avenue, Mount Hope, ran to her home, 100 yards away, but died from internal injuries an hour after. The accident occurred at the Centenary street bridge, the child running directly in front of the machine.

HERO MEDALS FOR GUN CREW AT FT. MONROE

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Medals for heroism will be awarded by the Government to the men who distinguished themselves by bravery at Fort Monroe, when eleven men were killed by an explosion during battle target practice. The men injured when their comrades were killed are at the fort hospital and all are expected to recover.

A supplementary official report on the disaster was received at the War Department today from Colonel Townsley, commanding the troops at the fortress. It follows:

"Accident due to the premature discharge of gun No. 1 in the De Russy battery by the breech block blowing to the rear, the discharge occurring before the breech block had begun. Captain James Prentice was in command of the battery, Lieutenant G. P. Hawes was in charge of the emplacement and Lieutenant L. L. Van Deusen acted as timekeeper.

"The discipline at the battery after the accident was excellent. Sergeant Brink, gun pointer; Corporal Humphreys, range setter, and other enlisted men at the gun, although shocked severely and injured, rendered immediate aid under the supervision of officers to those who were severely injured or mortally wounded.

"Lieutenant Van Deusen, struck by a fragment, which broke his leg, and slightly burned by gases, supported himself on the trunnion of the platform and directed assistance which was offered to him to others in the vicinity, who were lying helpless with burning powder gains in their clothing.

"Lieutenant Hawes extinguished with his bare hands burning material that threatened to ignite the second powder charge, which was on its way to the emplacement. The safety devices on the gun prevented any accidents of this kind impossible. The disciplined was exceptionally well trained and expert."

MAYOR SEEKS WAY TO SAVE DRISCOLL

Mayor Fitzgerald declared to-day that he would ask the Civil Service Commission to give Dennis B. Driscoll, the labor leader, a non-competitive examination for the position of deputy to the penal institutions commissioner.

The Mayor was greatly surprised when informed that his appointment of Driscoll could not be accepted, because the position was under civil service regulations and would have to be filled by requisition.

"Corporation Counsel Babson stated that he did not think that the position came under civil service rules," the Mayor said.

"I shall make a requisition on the Civil Service Commission for a list of eligibles for this place. Then I shall ask the Civil Service Commission to approve a provisional appointment of Mr. Driscoll as deputy penal commissioner."

INSANE; CUT THROAT.

NEWFIELD, Me., July 22.—Joseph Perry, aged 80, a prisoner, who was committed suicide, cutting his throat with a razor. Death ensued in a few minutes. Symptoms of insanity have been noticeable in his actions recently. He left a widow and family.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Just at present the market is waiting on the crops more than anything else.

$ $ $

Crop reports continue to be conflicting, but the general outcome is viewed with more complacency. The report of the Department of Agriculture will be out on August 8 and the expectation is that it will show an improvement over the exhibit of three weeks ago.

$ $ $

The market can advance considerably from the present level on the covering of the outstanding short interest.

$ $ $

While admitting that standard stocks might sell off a few points, it is believed that on any recession the investment buying would be sufficient to give a steady tone again.

$ $ $

Immediate movements of a general character in the market are not being predicted by those who are best able to judge. While there is a better sentiment in the street the fact still remains that the buying power is limited.

$ $ $

State Street people think the political situation and the fear that the future may have something bad in store are the influences tending to keep investors out. The latter are impressed with the idea that they can get stocks cheaper later on.

$ $ $

That the market is oversold there is no doubt, and the suspension of liquidation indicates that those who are long of stocks are convinced that the best thing to do is to hold on to them. Offerings are light on very little and above the ruling price, and the opinion among traders is that the range of the list will be raised easily without taking much stock.

$ $ $

To-morrow's bank statement promises to be a good one, and this will help the good feeling along. Furthermore the ability of the banks here not only to take care of themselves, but to arrange adequately that all demands, no matter where they may originate, will be duly provided for, manifest, and the money situation is regarded as satisfactory. No fears whatever are felt for the future.

$ $ $

There is conservative buying of the rails, but at the same time it is of a confident nature, and the purchasers expect profits by the end of the Summer, at the latest. They do not see how the railroads can go down much further, seeing as there is no doubt regarding their maintenance of dividend rates.

$ $ $

In some parts of the trading district there is an impression that, after all, the legislation put through Congress in the late session will prove more bullish than bearish, so far as railway stocks are concerned. The trepidation in railroad circles has quieted down somewhat and there is a disposition to await developments coming rather than to fret and fume and indulge in gloomy predictions.

$ $ $

Despite the fact that Northern Pacific recently granted an increase in wages to employes, and that the net earnings are far from satisfactory, it is the expectation in official quarters that net earnings from now on will show a steady gain. There is no doubt that the road has its working expenses under better control. Maintenance costs, charged to the operating account, have been reduced and the ratio of traffic expenses to gross also shows more economical operations.

$ $ $

When Baltimore & Ohio's annual report appears it will exhibit gross earnings of $2,000,000 in excess of the best previous year's figures, a balance after charges and preferred dividends equal to upward of 9 per cent. on the common stock and a final surplus after the common dividends of $4,500,000 or $5,000,000. It will not show the best net earnings in the history of the company, but these will be nearly a third greater than they were in 1908.

$ $ $

Atchison hesitates about going to par, but the general belief is that it will be there before long and continue to sell above the 100 mark. Discussion as to the probability of a reduction in the dividend rate has about ceased because of the prevalent opinion that the 6 per cent. rate will stand. The ability of the company to maintain it is not questioned.

$ $ $

This is not regarded a favorable moment for a rise of consequence in Southern Pacific, but at the same time those who know the situation best would not think of selling it short. The road is favored to pays more than 5 per cent, and many investors have been taking it on in anticipation of the rise they feel will come in the not very distant future.

$ $ $

Whitney, Watson & Co. have opened an office at No. 76 Main street, Hyannis, for the transaction of a general brokerage business.

$ $ $

Under the firm name of John Burnham Company, Early A. Morey of Dedham and Everett A. White of West Norton and Thomas W. Streeter of this city have filed articles of incorporation with the intention of conducting a stock brokerage business with the Secretary of the Commonwealth. The company is capitalized at $20,000.

$ $ $

If the Morgan party does not do something in the way of redeeming its promises to the holders of United Shoe preferred common to advance the price there may be still further liquidation in the stock. To the casual observer there seems to be but little sense in a 5 per cent. issue selling around 70, especially when the directors of the Steel Corporation practically have guaranteed the dividend.

$ $ $

Declaration of the regularly quarterly dividend of $2 per share and an extra dividend of $2 per share on the stock of the Boston & Montana means a total distribution of $900,000 or an increase of $1,200,000 over the three months ago. As this rate will continue to maintain the surplus revenue of the Amalgamated, which owns about all the Boston & Montana stock, will amount to $6,000,000, an amount equal to about $1.50 a share on its own stock.

$ $ $

The annual report of the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company for the year dated April 30, shows an increase in the gross and loss surplus of $8,329 during the year. The ore treated was 2,600,000 tons, but contents were richer so that the refined copper was 1,822,000 pounds, or 10,707,600 pounds greater than the previous year. The total number of shares of other companies owned on April 30, 1910, was 619,591 compared with 601,842 a year ago, the previous year an increase of 7,880. Statement of the Copper Range shows a decrease of 1,730; Cliff an increase of 19,400; La Salle decrease of 6,550; Laurium increase of 6,497. Isle Royale increase of 7, and White Pine increase of 465 preferred shares.

FINDS DIAMOND WORTH $150,000

NEW YORK, July 22.—A report reached Malden Lane from Johannesburg, South Africa, of the finding of another Diamond at the Premier mine. The gem is said to weight 193 carats and is described as a pure white stone, absolutely flawless and measuring two inches long by about three quarters of an inch thick. It tapers to a breadth from one and one-fourth inches to three-quarters of an inch at the smaller end, and is estimated to be worth $150,000 uncut.

BETTER TONE IN WALL ST.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Prices were irregular at the opening of the stock market to-day, but the tone was generally good. There was a fractional advance in several of the more important railroad and industrial shares. The opening here reflected fractional advances in American stocks in London. The reduction of the dividend on National Lead common apparently lost a great deal of its influential force over night.

The copper shares today were among the strongest features of the list, with Smelters topping the gain at the opening of the market. Smelters was up 3 points above the public, while Amalgamated copper gained 2¾ points. National Lead, after losing 1¾ of a point, lost the gain when the stock loosened up on the advance. Southern Pacific started off on a fractionally lower level than yesterday's close, but it is said to a report that the Gould lines trans-Pacific line had severed its connection with that road and had joined forces with the Western Pacific. The feeling was reflected in a gain of 5 points in Missouri Pacific, which controls the Western Pacific through the Rio Grande.

Cash grib market opened steady. A better tone was indicated in the copper shares.

BOSTON BOAT RUNS FIRST IN A SPEED TEST

NEW YORK, July 22.—The old question as to just which passenger-carrying steamship plying into New York rules the waters around here for speed came again to-day. It was raised as the result of a race, a real "thriller" between the steamship Monmouth which runs to Atlantic Highlands and the Harvard, which travels between here and Boston.

For two years a warm dispute has been going on among mariners and sea-going commuters as to whether the Monmouth or the Harvard was the fastest boat. The race did not settle it, either. 'Tis true that the Harvard caught up with the Monmouth and led her, while millionaires and brokers on the Atlantic Highlands boat smashed their teeth. But 'tis also true that the captain of the Monmouth by expert naval jockeying reached his pier first and vowed the race was his.

The Harvard, coming in the outside route from Boston, was approaching Sandy Hook when the Monmouth offered her the channel from the Highlands, 200 yards ahead of her. So did the Monmouth, and both boats grew excited. Then did the whistles and the drums. It was a fifteen-mile race into New York. The Harvard gained steadily. Its lucky captain by one wasn't on the Monmouth just then or he might have had to squat on the safety valve, like the "nigger" in John Hay's poem.

At any rate they managed to keep the boats down and the Monmouth reeled wildly and rocked, but the Harvard was doing so nice kept gaining. Just past Fort Washington the Harvard passed the Monmouth. The Atlantic Highlands boat saw the inside channel in the outside route from Boston, was approaching Sandy Hook when the Monmouth offered her the channel from the Highlands, 200 yards ahead of her. So did the Monmouth, and both boats grew excited. Then did the whistles and the drums. It was a fifteen-mile race into New York. The Harvard gained steadily. ARMY COOKS TO GO TO SCHOOL

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The aroma of pate de boeuf and frappe de corn pone is carried in general order No. 153 of the War Department. According to the direction of the acting chief of staff, General Carter, two schools of cooking and baking are to be established for the good of the army in the regular army.

The schools—one at the Presidio, San Francisco, the other at Washington barracks, District of Columbia—will be conducted with a view to turning out the best article of army cooking ability to be found anywhere in the world. The term extends over four months, allowing for the graduation in three months of those especially qualified.

ADMITS KILLING 5 LITTLE ONES

TOURS, France, July 22.—A rag picker named Joseph has confessed to the assassination, April 21, 1904, of five children of a farmer near Rebeux in the vicinity of Chartres. The father of the children was found guilty of the murders and sentenced to life imprisonment. He died in prison.

The trial of Brière attracted the attention of the whole of France. Four of the daughters, aged respectively fourteen, eleven, six and four, and his son, seven years of age, were found in bed one morning, stabbed and beaten to death. Circumstantial evidence led to the conviction that the farmer, considering his family an encumbrance, murdered his five children in order to marry again.

The Kind of Justice That Crippen Will Find in England

Very Different From the American Brand—AND MONEY, IF CRIPPEN HAS IT, WON'T COUNT.

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

You know what happens in America when the interesting hero of a sensational murder is locked up.

NOTHING HAPPENS, FOR A LONG TIME.

The newspapers discuss the crime. They illustrate it. Clergymen, ladies and young reporters write about it, and preach about it.

Intelligent lawyers, in search of the limelight, struggle for the honor of defending the criminal.

The days pass, weeks, months, and even years go by—and still the case drags along with delays, appeals, new appeals, expert testimony, trips to the insane asylum, efforts to get out of the insane asylum—and so on indefinitely.

If Crippen had committed his crime in America and were arrested here, he could count on three or four years at least of life, and regardless of his guilt, with the aid of insanity specialists, he might live out his natural term.

It will be different with Crippen in England. They will simply ask, "Did this man murder the woman?" If they can prove that he did, THEY WILL HANG HIM. There won't be any appeals. Nobody will ask or care how much money Crippen has. If he had ten millions and could hire all the experts in the world, his money would not delay by one day his appearance on the gallows—assuming him to be guilty.

The English system is a great deal better than our own, for it discourages murder. In America there are more than ten times as many murders in proportion to the population as there are in England; and the percentage of murderers that go free in America is infinitely greater than in England.

A man who commits murder within reach of the English law knows in advance that if he is caught he will be hanged within a few days. He knows that there won't be any quibbling about the evidence or about a misspelled word. It won't do him any good to prove that his aunt was nervous, or that his rich uncle drank himself into the insane asylum.

Prompt justice does more to prevent crime than the most severe punishment.

If we had the English system of quick trial, quick verdict and freedom from appeals, we might do away with capital punishment entirely, substituting life imprisonment—as we ought to do—and even with the less severe penalty murders would instantly fall off one-half, or more.

The English burglar does not carry a revolver. The English criminal generally takes every precaution NOT TO KILL ANYBODY, for he knows that when he kills another he also kills himself.

Too bad that we could not have fewer technicalities, fewer appeals, fewer specialists and fewer delays in our system of justice. Too bad that we cannot learn from the Crippen trial, in England, which will probably begin and end (in a hanging) in about one-half the time that our kind of justice would spend in getting a jury.

An Idea, Brilliant but Impracticable

President Young, of the National Education Association, has a suggestion. This thoughtful and amiable lady is of the opinion that the prize fight pictures are all right, provided only that they are carefully expurgated. In other words, the "brutal and distasteful portions" must be eliminated.

This is true of life in general. Take out everything that is "brutal and distasteful" and human existence would be one glad, sweet song. We should be angels prematurely, and there would be little or no need of a National Education Association.

As Mrs. Young has never seen a prize fight she probably does not understand that her suggested process of elimination is hardly practicable. The very things she would eliminate—the closing of eyes, the bleeding of noses, the disfiguring of countenances, the expression of pain and anguish, all these are as much a part of prize fighting as reading, writing and spelling are part of an education.

The lady's intentions are commendable, but her suggestion is worthless. A bull fight without a bull is no more impossible than a prize fight without the prize fight features. It is unnecessary to explain why this is so; it is enough to know that it is so.

Mr. Taft on Canadian Reciprocity

"Speaking for the Administration, we are convinced that a closer commercial relation with Canada will be well for both countries, and if in the next year we can come to any agreement to that end we shall think ourselves fortunate."

So spoke the President at Eastport.

The words deserve the greatest possible prominence in the newspapers and the serious consideration of Americans on both sides of the long political line.

"Neither country," said the President, "ought to be envious of the other, but each ought to be convinced that the more prosperous the one, the more likely the other is to be prosperous, and that the growth of the trade of the one means the growth of the trade of the other."

This newspaper has always stood for the principle of protection and for the thoroughgoing application of that principle, so far as it can be applied for the development of our own industries.

But Canada is so related to us in history, in geography and in natural endowment that the industrial advantage of both countries will be best subserved by the most cordial reciprocity and the scaling down of the tariff wall.

The protective principle has been falsely applied in this case.

A high tariff has driven into Canada industries that properly belong to the United States. And the raw materials of the great northern country have in turn been barred out of their natural market.

Every consideration of sound political economy must make its appeal to Washington and to Ottawa for the clearing of the meridian trade-routes and the expansion of the free field of American continental commerce.

More Police on Common Demanded

O'Meara Makes Belated Raid at Midnight, When Prospective Victims of Crooks and Hoodlums Had Gone Home.

The unaccountable attitude assumed by Commissioner O'Meara in connection with the request of Mayor Fitzgerald for more adequate police protection in Boston Common and the Public Garden is reflected in a report in to-day's Boston Globe of the activities of the police force last night following the publication of the correspondence between the two contending city officials. The Globe, which may be regarded as more friendly than otherwise to Mr. O'Meara, says:

> But the grand cleaning up came at midnight, one hour after the Fitzgerald guards had gone off duty. At that hour the policemen went through the park like a whirlwind and drove them all out.
>
> The policemen began a double quick movement through the Common. They drove the loungers from the benches and the grass before them like cattle.
>
> Then the Common was safe, sane and clean, so the policemen said.

Boston people who are prone to look at things with pretty level heads are without doubt asking themselves to-day why in the name of common sense the police waited until midnight, after practically all respectable people were at home and in bed, where they could not be annoyed by crooks, to go through the Common "like a whirlwind" and clean out Boston's central breathing spot! Why lock the door after the horse is stolen?

Why wasn't the Common cleaned of crooks and dissolute people early in the evening, so that decent people could enjoy the park?

Commissioner O'Meara will hardly continue his contention that the Common does not need better police protection when he gets the full benefit of public opinion on this matter in Boston. Some of this has manifested itself in letters of support from men of prominence and probity that have reached Mayor Fitzgerald. The Boston newspapers are against the Commissioner. This is what the conservative Advertiser says:

> The opportunities for unpleasant occurrences on the Common, with possibilities of serious consequences, are apparent to anyone who is familiar with the facts. The evils should be diminished now, before their importance has been emphasized by occurrences which could be avoided through prompt action.

The Post and Journal are even more emphatic editorially for better conditions on the Common, while the Herald declares that the leading thoroughfares of Boston are not kept "clear of rowdy and disorderly persons of either sex" by the police, as they should be.

If Boston Common and the Public Garden are not properly policed, and if the streets are not adequately taken care of by the force, as the Herald avers, Bostonians would probably like to know from Mr. O'Meara just what his force is doing efficiently.

Found Money

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

AFTER working and scrubbing, toiling and moiling for a week, Mrs. Nolan received a $5 bill as her pay.

On the way home she lost it.

After a month of golf, boating, tennis and dancing, which costs the equivalent of a workwoman's wages for many months, Mr. Arthur Watson walked up the street and picked up Mrs. Nolan's $5 bill.

"Found money!" he exclaimed, tucking it safely in his vest pocket. "Let me see," he said. "Back to business to-morrow, so this goes for a theatre ticket and a bit of supper afterward."

What he really meant was that the $5 bill would go "toward" a theatre ticket and a bit of supper, and it didn't go so very far, either.

II.

WHAT happened to Mrs. Nolan?

The $5 bill just covered the week's expenses of food, fire and rent, with a margin of 50 cents toward a bit of holiday for little crippled Tim, whose body was of no use to him below the waist.

So what happened was this: She went to the bureau drawer, took out little Tim's "bit-of-a-holiday money," slowly collected in nickels and dimes, and paid the week's bills; for Mrs. Nolan, while not a capitalist, insisted on doing a cash business.

"It was to be a surprise for him!" she explained to herself. "But as he doesn't know about it, I'll manage to make it up at Christmas," and she added, "with God's help."

III.

AND what happened to Mr. Arthur Watson?

Nothing.

He might never have discovered Mrs. Nolan even if he had proclaimed his find from the housetops. His was no conscious fault. His error was of another sort. He was used to $3 bills; so used to them, in fact, that it never occurred to him to translate one of them into the terms of its most common possibilities, aside from a theatre ticket and a bit of supper after.

But if he had sought he could have found other equivalents—the relief of suffering, the giving of joy where little joy ever comes, the opening up of opportunity, the happiness stored up by one heart in the love of another by way of slowly gathered nickels and dimes.

An occasional translation of money into these terms is so easy that not to do it is amazing. No less amazing is it that we forget "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these."

For the world is full of Arthur Watsons.

It is also full of little crippled Tims and Mrs. Nolans.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About Fiction Writing

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THE teecher asked me to rite a story, Sam Bekshun, I told Pa. She wanted me to rite a story about three (3) karakters, & asked me to make the scene of this story in the grate frozen wastes of the northwest.

That is a hard subjeck for a litel boy, sed Pa. I dount see how she cud expeck a boy of yure age to know about the grate northwest, to say nuthing about wastes.

I have my story all done alreddy, I sed. It is cailed The Mounted Poleece, or A Tale of the Frozen Silences. Frozen Silences doesent sound good, Bobbie, sed Pa. You better chainge that line. Not a chanse, I told Pa. Frozen Silences dident sound good to me wen I rote it first, but I have read so many stories wich cailed it frozen silences that I had to put that part in. Then Pa & Ma asked me to read my story & this is the story. I hop you will all like it as well as Pa & Ma liked it.

THE MOUNTED POLEECE

The North had gripped its uniyuns. It was Winter, not the Winter of the Dakota prayrys, not the Winter of Wisconsing's pine woods—it was the steel trap Winter, the Winter whose cold is as hot as white iron.

Tim O'Brien, agent of the Hudsons Bay Company, sat glaring out at the wastes, with his back to the huge fire in the lunge fire place. He never onst turned, beekaus his face kep warm by teh sun wich came thru the window, & the Hudsons Bay peepul is very anxious to save foal.

The door to the trading post store swung suddenly open, & a tall Injun stood in the doorway. He was as strate as a beet bow, wich was strate sauf for any Injun in that yeast country.

Heep furs, heep nice furs, sed the Injun. Me want tea.

Tim O'Brien looked long & coldly at the cold Injun. Why are you here at this time of yere? he sed. Why are you not out tending to yure line of traps?

Me want tea, sed the Injun. Heap long way I come. From Lac Saint Susie. Tea, cold tea, me want. Then the Injun fell to the floor.

Chapter II.

Another month of bitter cold had past. The Northern Lites never stopped playing, the Ice King never stopped working. The face of the erth & the streams were as dark & never all hing a silence.

It was the silence of the grate North, such a silence as mite have been in the tombs of the Tolemys, only a colder silence.

Tim O'Brien had watched over the Injun with the tender care of a woman. While the red skin was tossing between Life & deth. At last the Injun's eyes fluttered & he set up on the pile of furs wich the agent had put him on.

How about that cold tea? he sed.

I drank it all, sed Tim O'Brien.

Then I ate happy, sed the Injun, & fell back on his rude couch.

Poor devil, sed the agent. Them is fine furs. They feel like velvet and they are velvet.

The End.

After I had finished my story Pa & Ma both patted me on the head. I am commencing to think I am pretty smart.
